CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—State Rail Commissioners of States which have in force reduced express rates will fight here today to prevent by the convention of the Interstate Commerce Commission the establishment throughout the country of uniform rates based on the Interstate Commerce Commission's rates, it was said, when their rates increased by one-half last year.The representatives of the city let it be known that they will not agree to take any steps toward the adoption of the provisions of the new rates which they had gained, in political fight, in the resolution finally adopted by the commissioners for the reduction of rates on the lines of the country which was adopted by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Powers of arbitration claimed by the commissioners were denied by the provision that a modification shall be submitted to the commissioners to meet their objection. When this provision was made clear, opposition was withdrawn.The commissioners were united in favor of uniformity of rates, but the State representatives were urging adoption of the "block" system, as advantageous to the country if their intra-state
commodities of ten, two, four and one, were appointed to the modifications in the system."block system" of rates was proposed by the Interstate Commerce Commission, one division of the five traffic blocks in the country into blocks of about four miles each. Express rates would be based on the distance from the nearest block modification and be divided into sixteen regions.will furnish, according to the association, according to the terms of the agreement in accordance with local and State regulations.

PRICHARD SETS NEW RECORD.

Cubs Oxy Cross-Country Mark to 19 Minutes.

Tiger Distance Men Show Form in Race.

Trojan Sprinters to Have a Chance Next Week.

BY OWEN R. BIRD.

Fred Prichard, a Tiger freshman, stepped out on the annual Occidental cross-country bronc run yesterday and matched Mr. William Arden's record for the three- and half-mile course, completing the rather difficult ramble in just 19 minutes even. He started with an exceeded bunch, four seconds behind Thorpe, who came in for second place in 19m. 46s.

In justice to our rising friend Arden, it must be stated that he was not among those present when Coach Pipal lined up his aspirants for the start, otherwise Bill might still be holding his own record or a better one.

Fred Thorpe was first through the gate, as the runners swarmed into the field for the dash, but he had hardly gone ten yards when Paul burst into view, running high, wide and handsome. Mr. Thorpe looked rather all in, while Paul seemed to have all the "Bunker Hill" pep in the world. He finished running true to a good long-distance form, and can be considered a sure-fire Tiger distance possibility this season.

The runners finished as follows: F. Thorpe, Hoyt, Bickford, Prichard (winner), Jones, Holden, Pierce, Monahan, T. Prichard, George Thorpe, Hyman, Mansfield.

Varsity Cross Country.

The time made in the Tiger cross-country run yesterday by so many men goes to show the Cub will be well represented in the intercollegiate cross-country run next month, the grind men from Pomona, U.A.C. and Occidental meet at the Exposition Park, and a half-mile course for the long-distance team title of Southern California.

With five collegians in the running and two of them, Pomona and U.A.C. probably entering two teams, the field should not only be a fair one, but congested as ever, for it is not unusual for the two divisions in this intercollegiate sport to reach its most interesting stage.

The First Trojan Test.

Next Tuesday afternoon we are to get the first authentic line on the Trojan relay and sprint men. At this time the tryouts for the Tournament of the Americas intercollegiate and open relay are in progress, and the results on the Trojan squad are expected to show their merit.

The event is to be run in heats over the one-half mile, and, as the veterans are being run by themselves and the green hands being set apart in heats of their own.

Rally, Laird, Berger, Jackson, Morris and probably Courtney will make up the veterans class, while the novices number scores. However, among the new ones, Craig, Young, Hart, Hance, Werner and a few others are expected to show form and speed as well. One interesting fact is that he is built on a generous base, seems to have almost perfect form, and is to be limited to twenty-five miles at any time during the spring.

U.A.C. Strength Unknown.

It is impossible to say just how strong the U.A.C. team will be, but the record shows that it will surpass the famous 1912 as a generation, while others think that it will fall short of that star bunch by many points.

The match rests with the development of the new men in the team and the distance run. If these events can be strengthened, the team will be able to score more points, in

OXY CARNIVAL ON TODAY; L.A.A.C. MEETS ARDEN.

Football.

HERE is to be quite a bit stirring this afternoon in the football line, when the second annual high school football carnival will be staged by the Oxy Tigers on Baez Field. Manager Lawson of the Presbyterian college, states that he has eighteen schools in the field at the present time covering both the Rugby and the American fields.

The events of the afternoon include individual skill and team play for both lines. In the personal events there is already a great deal of rivalry between the two fields. The Rugby players now that there is to be a Christmas day game between the two factions to prove the merits of the two styles of football.

The Rugby men say that they are confident that they can outpace and outlast any American players in the field, and furthermore are ready to prove their point.

In the competition for team play the American teams are to run the ball, and the Rugby teams are to attack and defend for critical stages in the game. The Rugby teams are to be lined up in seven-man order, two men representing the scrum, the halves will be thirty minutes each. The game with the Olympic Club will be held at Washington Ball Park December 21.

DIAMOND DICK LIVES UP TO HIS COGNOMEN.

BY BONNIE GLESSNER.

DIAMOND DICK in Carlton by morning had worked himself into a humor so foreign to his usually sunny disposition as to alarm his friends in charge. By noon he was as noisy and cranky as his name would warrant, and it was thought advisable to give him a short exercise. The exercise was to be out on the big level field of Tournament Park, Dick was in his glory, and after a half-hour of racing and turning he was all out of breath, and the ponies mowed and munched with relish the grass he had scoured in the morning.

Because it would not be advisable to allow Diamond Dick to get away with his fun, Bob Burke will ride the big black in one of the chuckhunks next Saturday, as Burke will be out of the city for the week-end.

Diamond Dick is one of Burke's ponies having been played for four years, but returning to the game this season in better condition than ever before. Burke expects to make a splendid showing with Dick this evening.

All the polo ponies are enjoying the practice games very much and show their high spirit on all occasions. The five who will start promptly at 5 o'clock and will be open to the public.

TO PLAY POLO.

BY A. P. NEALE, WRITER TO THE TIMES.

HILLTOP TROPHIES (Cal.) Dec. 12.—The U.S.C. coaches hope to schedule two southern intercollegiate meets this spring other than the regular A.A.U. open championships. This will leave the calendar rather full, but the coaches are agreed that the series will be played within a month.

The San Mateo challengers are: Mrs. Thomas A. Driscoll, Mrs. Felton, Mrs. Christian de Guigne, Jr., Mrs. Charles W. Clark and Mrs. Robin Hayne.

The five who will represent Bar Harbor are: Miss Estelle Chase, Mrs. Leo Girvin, Mrs. Gould, Mrs. Ward Warren and Mrs. Eugene Murphy.

Fut Competition Here.

But in regard to the two meets mentioned, first the coaches would like to meet Pomona on the Alumnae at Claremont, and second an all-southern team, picked from the remainder of the local colleges, the meet to be limited to twenty-five miles.

The meet with Pomona at Claremont is desired because the up-to-date track is about the fastest thing in the line in the State, and the Trojans would have a whack at a few records this season.

The meet with the All-Southern team is sought in order to give the veterans a hard meet before going on Baez Field, prior to the L.A.A.C.-Arden Rugby game, and then will go to Pomona, where the members of the squad are to be entertained by the Pomona High School.

To Establish Records.

The local A.A.U. Record Committee is going to compile a complete list of all Southern California records this season for a Pacific Coast record book, and when the U.S.C. athletes begin to compete in the various marks they want to get a little more representation on the Coast sheet.

HIGH SCHOOL CHAMPS ARRIVE.

The Palo Alto High School football team is scheduled to arrive this morning at 9 o'clock. The team will probably be here this afternoon, probably on Baez Field, prior to the L.A.A.C.-Arden Rugby game, and then will go to Pomona, where the members of the squad are to be entertained by the Pomona High School.

should take his place beside "Cupid" the Paige-Detroit would finish near first place. He did not miss his guess. The automobile editor rode with Scott and the result shows just how the Paige finished.

A. Lord drove a remarkable run with the baby Maxwell today. He finished in fifth place with a score that showed he had really tried to demonstrate what the smallest car on the tour could do when given a task. He hit every control almost to the second and came in last in the Diego to-night with the colors.

The running of the Maxwell has made many friends for this wonderful little car which has shown to advantage on the first tour in which it ever been entered. A. Lord admits he is not as good a driver as Harry Lord, his son, and gives all the credit for the score to the car.

David Ryan finished just ahead of Leon T. Shettler. The motor chief drove the Oldsmobile over the high grade near Valley Center on the high gear and beat Shettler to the finish. The young man, who had maintained the pace set him by the Olds pilot and dropped back behind the six-cylinder, finishing two points behind the winner of the Baldy race.

RYAN AND SHETTLER.

Ryan has received only seven points against him. On some, there was enough to put him four places from last, but Shettler was nearer the body prize and finished only two points removed from last position. Shettler has not as yet turned the pink of condition, it is expected to give the local clubmen lively battle for the day. C. H. Mann, who has been in the lead all the time, will be thirty minutes each. The game with the Olympic Club will be held at Washington Ball Park December 21.

RYAN AND SHETTLER.

On Baez Field this afternoon the L.A.A.C. Rugby squad goes through its last practice game, before the battle with the Olympic Club of San Francisco. The team is composed of the newly-organized Arden Club. This club has made up of some famous Rugby players who have won their spurs in international play in England, Scotland, Ireland, France, Italy, etc. The team is not as yet in what might be termed the pink of condition, it is expected to give the local clubmen lively battle for the day. C. H. Mann, who has been in the lead all the time, will be thirty minutes each. The game with the Olympic Club will be held at Washington Ball Park December 21.

RYAN AND SHETTLER.

The Rugby men say that they are confident that they can outpace and outlast any American players in the field, and furthermore are ready to prove their point.

In the competition for team play the American teams are to run the ball, and the Rugby teams are to attack and defend for critical stages in the game. The Rugby teams are to be lined up in seven-man order, two men representing the scrum, the halves will be thirty minutes each. The game with the Olympic Club will be held at Washington Ball Park December 21.

RYAN AND SHETTLER.

The events of the afternoon include individual skill and team play for both lines. In the personal events there is already a great deal of rivalry between the two fields. The Rugby players now that there is to be a Christmas day game between the two factions to prove the merits of the two styles of football.

Sleepy John of Polo Fame Located.

Stallion Missing for Four Years.

Said to Be at El Cajon Ranch.

BY BONNIE GLESSNER.

In these days, when good polo ponies are almost as scarce as the proverbial "hen's tooth," the rumor that "Sleepy John," the remarkable stallion who sired so many splendid polo ponies and who, together with his owner, Leo Lowry, dropped out of sight four years ago, has been located, will cause a stir in polo circles.

Word has been received by Hobby Neustadt, whose wonderful polo horse "Muggins" is by Sleepy John, that this famous sire is at present at the El Cajon ranch, and that the once-remarkable stallion is now totally blind. This report is to be verified at once by the polo men, for the interest in Sleepy John has never abated since it was discovered five years ago.

WILLIE YELLS FOR MONEY.

Murphy and Champion Fail to Agree

Upon Terms for a Second Match.

Ritchie May Fight in New Year Instead.

BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES
SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Financial differences have brought a halt to negotiations for the resumption of Willie Ritchie and Harvey Murphy for a twenty-round match in the latter part of January or in February.

With Jim Buckley demanding, on behalf of Murphy, a straight 25 per cent this time instead of a chance of what money might be left over after the Ritchie guarantee was settled in full and with Ritchie insisting that he must have no less than the $15,000 he was to have been paid last Wednesday night, promoter Jim Coffroth declared he could not see his way clear to signing the bargain so far as having to finance the bargain so.

LONG GAB-PIEST.

Managers of the two lightweights spent several hours together in Coffroth's office this afternoon and when they separated after 6 o'clock they were just as far from reaching an agreement as before they started.

The two managers, the situation came down to this sort of a proposition.

Coffroth offered Ritchie a guarantee of $15,000 with the privilege of taking 25 per cent of the gross receipts of the fight, without a guarantee of the receipts, without a guarantee. Ritchie refused to take less than a $15,000 guarantee for his end, and the conference was broken up with Coffroth declaring that so far as he was concerned he considered the match over.

MURPHY AND MORAN.

Furthermore, it is declared by Coffroth that in the event of Ritchie and Murphy being out of the running, he will make an effort to use Marion Tommy and Owen Moran in a match against the British boxer, who is sufficiently good showing against Joe Ansevedo, next Tuesday night, in Oakland. Nothing will be done for several days and it is possible that either Coffroth or the two men in the way out of an adjustment will be made.

BENNY CHAVEZ AND JIMMY FOX FIGHT SNAPPY DRAW.

BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES

DENVER, Dec. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Benny Chavez, the clever Colorado boxer, put up a snappy fight against Jimmy Fox, the California featherweight, in their fifteen-round bout here last night, the verdict being a draw. Chavez boasted his opponent was all the fine points of the game and the crowd cheered when the verdict was given for an even break.

Chavez lacked steam behind his punches, and that's the secret of the whole story. The Coloradan could easily have won with a punch, but Fox

YALE CAPTAIN CALLS FOR CONFERENCE OF COACHES.

BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES

NEW HAVEN, (Conn.), Dec. 13.—Capt.-elect Nelson Talbot of the Yale football eleven has invited about a dozen former Yale football captains and prominent players to meet him here next Saturday evening to discuss the season of 1914. The list comprises practically the alumnus that formed the coaching staff of Capt. Henry Ketcham the past fall. Capt. Talbot said that he wished to talk over general matters, but that nothing will be discussed of a specific nature and that the coaching staff will not be announced after the meeting.

Talbot's policy for next season will be shaped as a result of the meeting. A meeting such as it planned will, it is thought, point out the mistakes of the last season and make it possible to eliminate them next fall.

The football officials fully expect that Howard Jones will return next fall as head coach. Although he has signed no formal contract, he

LEVY MAY TAKE MEXICAN EAST.

Manager Joe Levy yesterday outlined his plans for Joe Rivera. In a nutshell they are: He expects to get a match with Ritchie either here or in New York. If Rivera boxes Ritchie here on Washington's Birthday, he will not meet anyone over the Derby route in the meantime, but Levy will take Rivera East for one short bout. He has offers from Billy Gibson of New York, Tortorich of New Orleans, and Coffroth.

In the event that Rivera meets Ritchie in New York over the ten-round route, Levy will attempt to get the February 25 date for him at Vernon against some opponent yet to be selected.

That Ritchie will grant Rivera a return match is regarded as certain.

to permit the original bout to be staged, "my position is simply this," said Coffroth. "The old 25 per cent is to give Ritchie $15,000. After that amount of money was taken into the box-office, Buckley and I were to split even on all the money that remained. For the next match Buckley demands a guarantee 25 per cent, or more. I am asked to give Ritchie $15,000, give Buckley 25 per cent of the gross, and run the fight for what would be left.

I did offer Ritchie first of all $15,000, and then a guarantee of 25 per cent, and then moved that up to $12,500. Meanwhile, Buckley, who had first wanted 25 per cent, came down to 25 per cent. The proposition wasn't satisfactory and I didn't go any further in the matter."

NEW YORK FOR RITCHIE.

Ritchie's argument is that if he was worth $15,000 to Coffroth for the former match that he should still be entitled to that sum.

"I'll talk about the scheduled fight of December 10 drawing $22,000," said the California, "and that a new match will be a better card if that is the case. I don't see why I should be worth the original sum of $15,000, which is what I am demanding. I would like to come to terms, but if we can't do that, I will have to turn elsewhere. Gibson has advised me that he will have an open date in January and will possibly be available to me at that time."

Despite Coffroth's assertion that he is through with the negotiations, there is reason to believe that negotiations will be resumed.

Ritchie's condition is steadily improving, although he is forced to visit his physician for treatment several times every day. There is far less inflammation and naturally less pain, and he is gradually regaining the use of his right arm, which will be entirely out of the way within the next two days.

More Pictures, Finer Paper, Better Drawings and Cuts, More Charming Colors, More Artistic Press Work—the "Edition de Luxe" of All Newspaper Annuals. The "MIDWINTER" this Season Beats Itself, Having No Other Competitor.

Not a flimsy, hastily constructed newspaper, to be glanced at and thrown down; but presented in substantial bound volumes of permanent worth—as valuable and readable six months hence as on the date of issue, January 1, 1914.

The "MIDWINTER" is the souvenir and encyclopedia of Southern California and the Southwest that you want to send by dozens to your friends in the East who wish to know about this part of the country. It answers all questions.

Among the topics treated are the wonderful extent of the edible resources of California, which grows almost everything the country; the date industry, the fig industry, the alligator pear, the cotton-growing industry and many other new industries of the Southwest; the surprising profits made on the land by ranchers and fruit growers; the millions of dollars that come out of the oil wells every month; the strides made and making by the Imperial Valley, but a few years ago a barren desert, now producing fabulous crops as a result of irrigation and making the cotton, cattle and produce growers rich; the new towns that have recently sprung up as if by magic in the San Fernando Valley; the kind of men and women who will succeed in the Southwest; the mud springs and mineral baths of California, rivalling those of Germany; the women ranchers of California; the progress of Arizona, New Mexico and Nevada; the health-restoring qualities of the climate; outdoor life in dollar-a-day homes; the grand proportions of the orange and lemon industry; the effects of the Panama Canal on Los Angeles commerce; the completion of that historic $25,000,000 municipal enterprise—the Los Angeles aqueduct; the opportunities in the Southwest for the man of small means; wages, chances and living cost in the Southwest.

Unfinished Preacher Helps Erect Building.

Five more than three years ago Rev. C. Johnson, a young Tennesseean, just out of the seminary, came to Los Angeles from Knoxville, seeking better health for a member of his family. He had made no plans to stay here, but was foot-loose for a time that might overtake his way. One good Baptist heard him preach from a pulpit in Newport, and concluded he ought to be at work in the city. He got on First Street, and soon found a small company of people had gotten together and opened the South Park Baptist Church, worshiping in a portable building. Rev. Mr. Johnson was invited to go and preach to them one evening, and he did there, still a student. He is now a member of a company of eighty members on San Fernando Street, and now has 475 members on San Fernando, who will build and pay for a handsome church, which may soon be completed by the methodist building fund. The services of the church and things generally are humming. The reason of it is that Johnson is a preacher. In addition to being well and popular, he is a man of unusual common sense and a natural teacher. He is declared to be one of the most eloquent men in the pulpits of Los Angeles, and his work indicates that he is a commanding general.

Thieves Find the Pin.

How thieves knew where a diamond stick pin was hidden is more than Mrs. Mildred Wray can fathom. She had the pin tucked in the far corner of the pocket of her coat, and it was in the back room, and yet thieves entered the house at No. 3659 Sabina street and found it. She reported its loss to the police yesterday.

Doing It Early, All Right.

The business of the city are keeping the stores open for their Christmas packing business early as indicated by the increase in the post-office receipts for the first eleven days of December, as compared with the corresponding period of 1911. The figures for the present year are $1,192,114, as against $55,188,61 for the first eleven days of the month of last year.

Sons of Veterans' Meeting.

Gen. W. S. Rosecrans Camp, No. 2, Sons of Veterans, their auxiliary, and James B. Bissell, Camp Ten, No. 4, will hold a union meeting and social time in Cleveland Hall, Mozart Theater building, Monday evening, December 18. Their guests will be members of three organizations from the surrounding cities, and a gathering is expected. The Sons will hold a short business meeting immediately preceding to initiate several recruits.

TO CELEBRATE COMPLETION.

Huntington Beach Has Fired the Date on Which It Will Invite the South to Visit.

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Dec. 12.—Tuesday, March 10, has been named as the date for the completion of the 300-foot long, 10-foot wide, reinforced concrete pier in this city and the cornerstone will be laid by the Masonic Grand Lodge of California. Committees to be chosen by the members have been appointed by the Board of the City Trustees and local Masonic lodge. Reduced railroad rates are to be secured on the Pacific Electric Railroad, and the cost of the pier's construction will cost several thousand dollars. It is to be a notable event in the history of this city.

Fifteen caravans of civic color were shown this week, consisting of the shipping point to the Huntington Beach color fields section. Big crews of men are now busy at work in the new crop, which will be excellent in quality.

Ground is to be broken Monday for the new Methodist Church, which is to cost $10,000. It will contain twenty rooms, including a parlor and Sunday-school room and other church purposes, and all the rooms will be arranged as to provide for their being made one auditorium when the necessary alterations are made. It is to be on six lots at the corner of Oliveview street and Orange avenue, recently donated to the church by the Methodist assembly of Southern California. The first service will be on December 25, adding to the funds already on hand is composed of Mayor W. D. Seely, Vice-President Charles H. Howard of the First National Bank, C. W. Warren, W. D. Seely, and W. D. Seely.

Gustav Frenkel of Lancaster, manager of the Pacific Oilcloth and Linoleum Company, whose plant is shortly to be erected here, and the man who will be in charge of the construction in Philadelphia, reached this city yesterday and will be in charge of the building of the plant as well as its management, when completed. The other members of the firm will be the only ones west of Chicago, and will employ a large number of men.

and the worst is yet to come.

Thinness Easily Overcome

(From "Health and Beauty.")

Further evidence is being presented almost daily that a recent compound of new chemical elements, compounded in a tablet with hypophosphites is a reality proving a blessing to the abnormally thin person. It is believed that it can be sold beyond doubt, that a regular course of three or four months' treatment brings an increase in weight of from 10 to 20 pounds, with a corresponding improvement of health and color, too. For self administration the most popular form is to take from 10 to 20 tablets a day. The tablets, obtainable in sealed packages from the best apothecary shop, with full directions.

SECOND JUROR DISQUALIFIED.Investigation of the Federal Grand Jury Ordered.Peppery Session Ends With Demand for Inquiry.Interested Members Did Not Indict, Says Schoonover.The Federal grand jury investigators are to be investigated.Mondays afternoon at 3 o'clock Judge Wellborn will conduct an open inquiry in the United States District Court, to find out to what extent, if any, the members of that inquisitorial body were influenced by anything that Alonso G. Gear, a member of the panel, may have said about the affairs of the Los Angeles Investment Company, which might have brought about the indictment of the three former officials and employees of that corporation.For the purposes of the investigation, every member of the jury will be summoned to appear and tell his effect in any way the conduct of Gear affected him. It is alleged, previous to the charge against the company to the jury, that he proposed to the company that he was a member of the grand jury and that he, as a member, might be a friend in the investigation that he proposed being instituted.CHARGES MISDIRECTION.*
*Oscar Lawler, on behalf of the indicted men, said the matter was within the proper discretion of the court. He said the attorneys in the case thought that it was their duty to investigate what appeared to them to be an effort to use an arm of the government's power in attempting to bring the grand jury. Lawler paid a high tribute to the citizenship of the grand jury, but thought that in deference to the other members of the panel, the inquiry should be made. As it now stands the suspicion is in a measure upon them all. He read decisions of the highest court justifying an attorney in using his power in ascertaining whether anyone on the grand jury had a direct interest in matters that were being reported on by that body. F. G. G. Gear, attorney for the defendants, also spoke in favor of judicial interference.Dist.-Atty. Schoonover hotly and continually denied any appearance that he had ever used his influence in opposing attorneys. He stated that what had been complained of by counsel had all along been known to him. He said that the present interest of Gear in the collection of the $1000 gold note became known to him, through Gear himself. Gear was excluded from the juryroom, and he had no knowledge of the discussions that led up to the return of the indictment, or in the discussion of the matter that is still on before the court. Schoonover said that he was a member of the grand jury interested in the Los Angeles Investment Company, and when that fact became known to him that member was excluded from the panel. He recited had nothing to do with the case.Judge Wellborn confirmed the statement of Schoonover as to the interest of Gear, and he said he had no objection to the disqualification of that juror in the consideration of that case.REBUTE BY COURT.Dist.-Atty. Schoonover suggested that Mr. Lawler was of the opinion that the grand jury was composed of high-minded men, as everybody agreed, he placed himself in a somewhat unfavorable position in asking that they be investigated.This elicited an apology from Schoonover, who said he had no intention of reflecting either on the court or on Lawler, but he would not be deterred from doing his full duty in that case.WANT TO KNOW ABOUT IT.Railway Trainmen and Police Seek Information as to Mysterious Card Dealer—Vernon's "Country Club" Figure.Vernon's notorious "Country Club" is given as an excuse for the most appalling instance of depravity that the police have encountered in many months. A. Kautowitz, dealer in post cards at No. 113 North Spring street, is under arrest, charged with contributing to the delinquency of his wife, who is but a bride, and will probably face another ugly charge.According to the complaints made by the bride to Policemen Burgess and Kautowitz entered into matrimonial relations with her with criminal intent. Wednesday night she went to Vernon with her husband and Ray Goldberg. There, she informed him that she wanted to drink more than she could hold and retain her senses and what followed is the basis of the charge.The woman was sent to the home of the trainmen at No. 1807 East Thirty-eighth street, and the two men are facing arraignment.For Your Eastern Friends.The beautifully illustrated history of our great aqueduct. Over 100 views illustrating operations of construction and in its finished character, a clear and simple description of the engineering and will appreciate your Christmas remembrance. 25 cents per copy, ready for mailing. Address: American, First and Broadway; Times Branch, 615 S. Spring; Times-Mirror Printing and Binding House, 118 S. Broadway, and all news stands.The School Rooms are Invited to the First and Free Strain Induced by Faults of Lighting. Apply Mates to School Masters' Eyes to Ensure Normal Condition.SUIT OVER WILL DECIDED.
Supreme Court Affirms Decision in Case Involving Disposition of $200,000 Property.The Supreme Court has affirmed the decision of Superior Court Judge Wilbur in favor of the defendant in the action brought by Dr. W. Lemoyne Wills against his sister, Madeline F. Wills, and Louis N. M. Brainerd, personally and as executors of the estate of Charlotte L. Wills, deceased, for the recovery of $200,000, the disposition of property in this state, Montana and Minnesota valued at about $200,000.Dr. Wills sued his sister and the executors of his sister's estate to establish a trust in certain properties. The court found against him and also denied a motion for a new trial.John Wills, father of Dr. Wills and Madeline F. Wills, and husband of Charlotte L. Wills, died in November, 1911, and it was claimed by the son that the will of his father created an interest in the property in favor of Dr. Wills for the recovery of the property. The will left everything to the widow and the two children, and provided that after the payment of debts and expenses, the widow should have all the residue of the estate.It was also requested that the widow make liberal provision for the two children, W. Lemoyne and Madeline F. Wills, and that what was unexpended at the time of her death should go to the children.Under the will she had full authority to dispose of the property, subject to the trust, and she should make liberal allowances in favor of the children.It was claimed that Dr. Wills that his sister had induced their mother to transfer a number of pieces of property to her with the understanding that one-half of the income should go to the brother and that in time a one-half interest should be conveyed to him.Once a Year.CHRISTMAS FOR KIDS ANY TIME.CALENDAR IMPORTANT ONLY APPROXIMATELY.Date Set Ahead Yesterday When Many Schools Hold Celebrations. Trees Glow With Bright-Colored Cornucopias and Tinsel Ornaments. Plays Are Given.Christmas was set ahead several days for the "kiddies" yesterday. Generous youngsters of Cahuenga and Columbia-street schools furnished most of the props for a joyful little drama down at Macy-street school, where there was a continuous Christmas tree for one class after another, the children being recipients of wagonloads of nothing but toys, books, perfume and candy. Hidalgo's Moving Picture Theater also gave a similar programme for the children in the afternoon.Folk-dancing out of doors in the sunshines was the pastime at Hoover school, and after the little ones had received their presents was moved out on the playground. Three hundred children turned themselves "loose" in the quaint and pretty folk-dances of Spanish, Indian and English.Popping corns out of doors, over brickets bristles, was the holiday sport of the Forty-second-street school children who, after salting the large corn romped and played on the lawn. Bredwood school youngsters sent boxes of candy to the Children's Hospital.Through the efforts of Sup. Franklin Clegg, the city school system wasentertained from the city park department, which gave of its best, and these glowed with bright-colored cornucopias and twinkled with tinsel ornaments.Christmas ornaments were given to the Children's Hospital.Traveling bags and accessories—manicure sets, toilet sets, brush sets—color bags, bill folds and purses—ties, gloves and handkerchief cases—glove boxes—cigar and cigarette cases—serving sets—medicines cases—Thermos bottles in cases—and many other useful articles.

LETTERS TO "THE TIMES."

LAST VERDI CELEBRATION.

NOVED PROGRAMME FROM THE MAESTRO'S WORKS.

Any Comments?
LOS ANGELES, Dec. 11.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Allow me to say that I am any member of the public who shows his respects to the Maestro's works in Los Angeles.

He has a broad street show last evening and every evening was excellent. The crime in one form or another, with cheating, drawn; a drunkard attacking his wife and child, and the man who came to fight the man who came to fight, revenge, incendiaries and generalizing exhibition for men and youth who freely attend the newspapers take some in this matter?

For the Flower Show.
LOS ANGELES, Dec. 11.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I want to suggest that the selection of Lake Park for the Flower Show is a most unfortunate choice. It is situated in an appropriate part of town and not too far out. There will be plenty of lakes for water sports, and nooks for tender blossoms in various locations.

It would be an ideal permanent location. Money could undoubtedly be saved by using the same site for the Flower Show.

It is a wise one. We are predicting "easy money" out of the year. That is the best way to go.

It is understood he has stated that the newspapers take some in this matter?

FOUR AND OIL MEN.

Jergins read the words that she and her attorney and friends had written to congratulate her wife of Thomas Montague, who was in the hospital, on the announcement of the Cleveland Oil Company, that the verdict, gave a little more robust joy.

Frank Gillette, whose name was frequently mentioned in the news of the leading oil men of the Cleveland Oil Company, was the happiest man in the room. His loss of opportunity to express his joy at his compatriots' victory, however, was a source of great disappointment to him.

George Rudkin exonerated the four defendants and the jury in the prosecution of the officers of the Cleveland Oil Company was his only man to suffer in the case.

W. H. Hildard, secretary of the company, who some months are past, paid a fine of $1000, a witness for the government, with an unwilling out.

Henry B. Hildard, son of L. L. Hildard, president of the company, was the charming bride of a man to be married in Los Angeles after a honeymoon motorcycle tour of England, France and Spain. The young couple will make their home at No. 204 Westgate, where they arrived in New York immediately after the Cunarder Iverness.

Mr. Hildard, a graduate of the University of Southern California, has an extensive knowledge of engineering and hundreds of machines are ready to make the initial move over the bridge.

Preliminary to the opening of the bridge, a long series of tests were made of weights from the smallest to running heavy ones.

He and his bride, Miss Julia Marlowe, were graduated in the pathways of Europe.

He and hundreds of Los Angeles men, said Hildard, "I believe that our city is every bit as good as any abroad are from us."

Dedication of Arroyo Seco Bridge Unusual Event.

No Longer and Higher Structure in World.

Howard Huntington and Wife
Return from Tour.

Pasadena, Dec. 12.—The formal opening and dedication of the new Colorado-street bridge across the Arroyo Seco today will probably be the occasion for the greatest gathering of automobiles the city will have ever known. After the exercises, which are to be held on the site of the former Carmelita playground, the automobileists will be asked to form a procession and parade across the bridge, going from east to west. In behalf of the City Commission and the County Board of Supervisors, Commissioner of Albin yesterday issued the following notice:

At 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon the ceremonies of acceptance of the Colorado-street bridge across the Arroyo Seco will be followed at the City Hall demands to be followed by an automobile procession across the bridge to Eagle Rock.

"This is your bridge, built by the city for you. You have the right to use it. There are longer concrete bridges, there are higher concrete bridges, but we know of no concrete bridge combining as great length and height as does this bridge. We hope that you will know of any like structure having been built, either publicly or privately, where so much has been accomplished for the money expended.

The following were yesterday elected officers of the Girl Scout Council of Los Angeles: President, Mrs. L. L. Phillips; vice-president, Juliet Bagby; secretary, Helen Neilson; treasurer, Mrs. Marion L. L. Phillips; item representative, Beulah Jones.

The exercises will be short. If you have an automobile join the procession and let us show the representatives of other localities that we are greatly interested in our own affairs.

The bridge is 1465.5 feet long and 148.5 feet high at the highest point. The greatest width is 230 feet. The depth of the roadway is twenty-eight feet, and there is a sidewalk five feet wide on each side of it. The structure cost the city of Pasadena and Los Angeles County jointly approximately $200,000.

The total cost, including approach, right of way and all other expenses was $240,000. The work began on it in June. The work was begun by the firm of Waddell &amp; Harrington and the work was done by the Marceau Bright and Construction Company.

TO COME NEXT MONTH.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Huntington of Oak Knoll have returned home from the middle of last October. They passed much of the time in New York and there saw H. E. Huntington, father of Howard Huntington, who had recently returned to America from Europe, where they spent their honeymoon.

Huntington said last night that he expects his father to arrive in Pasadena next month to witness the opening of the new bridge.

AWAKENS AFTER A LONG STUPOR.Residents Oppose Destruction of Auditorium.Believe Structure Can Be Saved at Small Expense.Aged Cripple Has Board of Public Works Guessing.

LONG BEACH, Dec. 12.—Awakening apparently after six months of stupor, begun when the approach to the auditorium collapsed on May 24 and sent forty people to death and injured 200 others, citizens have for the past two days been realizing the full extent of the action of the Council in ordering the demolition of the big public building, and today a petition was opened in front of the First National Bank building asking the Council to rescind its action in asking for bids on the demolition of the building until a full investigation of the condition of the structure can be made, as well as run down rumors that the action has a deeper motive behind it than the mere wiping out of an unpleasant memory.

People crowded about the petition clerk waiting to sign, and in one hour over 1000 signatures were obtained.

The petition asked the Council to rescind its action, and cites as reasons for the action the fact that the Council, in recommending such action was only advisory and based on an accident to a part of the pier that was not part of the building itself; that its decision to demolish the building was based on the fact that the pier's defense in damage suits that have been filed; that prominent engineers and contractors have guaranteed to strengthen the building supports at a cost of $10,000.

It is expected that when the petition is presented to the Council next Tuesday night, it will have between five and eight thousand signatures, and the outcome before the year, an injunction will be sought against the opening of bids for the wreckage on Tuesday, December 23.

GOING SIDEWAYS.

Jacob Strasheim, an aged cripple 70 years of age, and his wife, aged 65, have the Board of Public Works, the police department and City Attorney going sideways today by reason of Strasheim's occupancy of a 100-foot wide on Seventeenth street, between Olive and Myrtle avenues, in the northern part of the city, claiming it as his private property, and his demands which indicate that he is correct.

Chief of Police Ross has been notified to keep a sharp lookout for two men who robbed the depot at Edna, San Luis Obispo county, Tuesday night. The men, who are 42 and 45 years old, left the station while the agent had gone home for dinner. They are believed to have headed this way.

Santa Barbara is now being the home of the American Film Company, one of the leading motion picture factories of the United States, no little interest is being taken in the picture stage. The enthusiasm has spread to the High School, and is inspiring the techniques of photoplay writing. The pupils have been instructed to write a play with some hero of American history as the leading man.

NEWS BRIEFS.

The tug Sea Rover, which came down from San Francisco last night, left for the north this afternoon, having in tow the big 175,000 steel dredge just completed by the Seafarers for the California Delta Farms Company, and is to be used in operations on the Sacramento River. It is said to be the largest of its type on the Pacific Coast. The trip north will consume about four weeks.

Major-elect Wheaton and seven Councilmen-elect, who take office the first Monday in January, conferred until the midnight hour at the office of the Mayor. The Mayor said today that he presented to Council various applications for office, but it was decided that no appointment except the Board of Works would be made. The Board of Commissioners will be considered until the new administration takes office, and no appointments will be announced until that time. He also stated that in this conference all party allegiance was forgotten.

Morgan Adam's yacht, the Mah Pa, built at Terminal Island at a cost of $9000, and flying the Sunset Club pennant, has been added to the Southern California syndicate, and will be entered in the international yacht race during the exposition. Adams has had a new yacht built on the Alameda Coast, and expects to bring it through the Panama Canal next spring in time for the Southern California regatta. The yacht is now in California waters, where Adams has spent six months.

Capt. Ed Blair of the launch Leone arrived home today from Portuguese Bend, where he took a moving-picture company to the coast. The Leone's landing boat drifted on the rocks yesterday morning and was shattered. A heavy southwest swell has been running for several days and has swept the beach and rocks at the bend perfectly clean.

HOLIDAY NUMBER.

BANNING, Dec. 12.—The Banning Ranch had a special holiday number this week. It has unusual merit in the descriptive matter it carries and is also a model in a typographical sense. The residents are presented in a lucid and temperate manner and the hopes of citizens are stated in a way that inspires similar faith in the breast of the reader.

REALTY DEAL.

A realty transaction of considerable importance was consummated yesterday, when Fred Dyckman purchased from the Banning Ranch property for $10,000 a frontage of 110 feet frontage on East Center street, improved with a two-story stone house and other frame buildings. The property is well known, having been the home of the late Mrs. Bessie E. Howell, widow of Trustee T. M. Howell.

GROcery TROUBLES.

George Tucker, from nowhere in particular, was taken to Santa Ana on Saturday morning, and committed for insanity. When found by Officer Germain, yesterday morning, the man was attempting to dash his brains out. Tucker seems to be suffering from a delusion, although his repeated attempts to commit suicide.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.
After meeting President Woodman, other members of the Harbor Commission yesterday voted to ask the creation of the job of Harbor traffic manager.

A Chinese youth passed the civil service test and earned the distinction of being the first colored to enter man in the Mayor's office.

Opposition to the confirmation of William J. Vartial as a member of the Humane Animal Commission dropped out yesterday when Councilman Snowden said he will lead a fight against the Mayor's appointee.

A woman witness in a suit involving her brother and mother forced a recess yesterday by becoming wildly hysterical, requiring the services of the County Health Officer.

A photograph of an alleged affair in London and love letters received by her husband in a secret small box were the basis of a secret suit yesterday which was won by the wife.

A bride of five months, who swore to complain implicating her husband and a friend, declared she only received $5 during that period and told of occurrences which caused the arrest of the men.

WORK AT HARBOR TAKES BOUND.

BOARD WANTS PLACE OF TRAP.
HARBOUR MANAGER CHEATED.

President Woodman, at First Session When He Calls for Action on Vital Measure Awaiting Attention, Wins Request from Association for Ordinance Making Job.

The letter of President Woodman calling upon his associate members of the Harbor Commission to get busy on vital harbor matters poked its head out of the files yesterday and started something. The letter was read a few days ago while the commission was in session. President Woodman had his nose buried in a speech he was to make, and Commissioners Oliver and Gordon gave Woodman scant courtesy by filing his letter away.

It didn't remain obscure for more than a few days. Yesterday the Harbor Commission adopted one of the suggestions demanded by the City Attorney to draft an ordinance creating the position of harbor manager in the Harbor Commission. This will go to the Council, and it is believed that the ordinance will be passed. His salary was fixed at $1,000 a month.

It is a matter of current rumor in the City Hall that Secretary of the Harbor Commission is about to resign for this reason. One of the chief reasons is that he has been devoting considerable time to traffic and transportation problems at the port, and that he is in a position to do more for the port than the needs of the harbor will allow. The augmented traffic appears with the opening of the Panama Canal.

Secretary Malton yesterday submitted to President Paul Shoup a draft of the proposed terminal agreement at the harbor. This will be sent to President Sprague of the Southern Pacific, and afterward will be submitted to the Outer Harbor Wharf and Dock Company.

CHINESE ON JOB.
ENTERING CITY'S EMPLOY.

Harry H. Lee, a Chinese, 24 years old, living at No. 1822 South Hill Street, will enter the employ of the City Monday as a draftsman in the City Engineer's office. Lee, an unscrupulous man of his white fellows in with a grade of 75.6 per cent, is required to be 75.6 per cent, and the distinction of being able to draw far from a regular employee.

When Lee's name was sent to the City Engineer for appointment there was a desire on the part of many of the others to bar the celestial. Department Manager Hanson waited upon President H. H. Lee of the Public Works to see if there is some way of getting Lee over to the side of his list. There being nothing he could do, he will join Monday as a city employee at $15 a month, the most he can lay on the list.

Lee is a native son, having been born in Los Angeles. He was graduated from the Polytechnic High School and last June got his diploma at the University of California at Berkeley.

CHARGES AHEAD.

OPPOSITION TO VARTIAL.
Councilman Snowden yesterday announced that he will lead a fight in the Council against confirmation of Mayor Rose's appointment of William J. Vartial on the Humane Animal Commission. According to the says Snowden, is president of the Horse Owners' Association, of which Snowden is president, because members of that association do not believe that Vartial is in sympathy with horse owners.

President Whitaker also announced yesterday that he will oppose confirmation of Vartial, but informed next Monday when the matter comes up, he will not have a vote on the question.

Can't Extend Franchise.

City Attorney Stephens yesterday reported that the Harbor Commission had the body cannot extend the wharf franchise of the San Pedro Dock Company for thirty years, as requested. The company has no franchise now held by the City Attorney. To obtain a franchise that company will have to submit to the City of Los Angeles. It is also held that the claim of the company for reimbursement by the city for improvements is illusory.

Plan on Accraze.
After presenting his resolution yesterday asking the city to appropriate $25,000 to make homes and tileless ground for homeless and unemployed along the waterfront and on other empty areas belonging to the city, Mr. Wheler asked the Public Service Committee to provide the Council with a list of all vacant lands owned by the municipality. The request for the minor was referred to the Finance Committee.

Appeals Station Ordinances.
The Public Utilities Committee of the Council yesterday approved the ordinances of the Southern Pacific station of the new Southern Pacific station in San Francisco. The indignant refused. Then he conducted a series of humiliations at the same time made the wife of relatives. Krautowitz induced his friend, Ray Geller, to hold a trial in the Vernon Court of Justice where, according to Geller's own admission, he was her liquor. Upon Mrs. Krautowitz's return home with Geller, she was intoxicated and accused her husband of physical force, compelled his wife to drink more liquor, meantime had a brief marriage. Mrs. Krautowitz says her husband only gave her $5.

REFUSED BY THE NURSE.

E. M. Barnes, a graduate of West Point, civil engineer, lawyer and poet, now patrolling the block, refers to install additional share houses that will accommodate a twenty-minute patrol. Tenants in the block have complained of conditions there and have asked the city for more protection.

She was a witness on the stand at the time under the cross-examination of Attorney Appel. Her condition was such that the county health officer, Dr. R. C. Sawyer, was called to attend her.

The action was brought by William F. McCann. It involves the ownership of the home in which Mary McCann, his mother, lives. McCann gave Woodman scant courtesy by filing his letter away.

Harry H. Lee, a Chinese, 24 years old, living at No. 1822 South Hill Street, will enter the employ of the City Monday as a draftsman in the City Engineer's office. Lee, an unscrupulous man of his white fellows in with a grade of 75.6 per cent, is required to be 75.6 per cent, and the distinction of being able to draw far from a regular employee.

When Lee's name was sent to the City Engineer for appointment there was a desire on the part of many of the others to bar the celestial. Department Manager Hanson waited upon President H. H. Lee of the Public Works to see if there is some way of getting Lee over to the side of his list. There being nothing he could do, he will join Monday as a city employee at $15 a month, the most he can lay on the list.

Lee is a native son, having been born in Los Angeles. He was graduated from the Polytechnic High School and last June got his diploma at the University of California at Berkeley.

OPPOSITION TO VARTIAL.
Councilman Snowden yesterday announced that he will lead a fight in the Council against confirmation of Mayor Rose's appointment of William J. Vartial on the Humane Animal Commission.

According to the says Snowden, is president of the Horse Owners' Association, of which Snowden is president, because members of that association do not believe that Vartial is in sympathy with horse owners.

President Whitaker also announced yesterday that he will oppose confirmation of Vartial, but informed next Monday when the matter comes up, he will not have a vote on the question.

Can't Extend Franchise.

City Attorney Stephens yesterday reported that the body cannot extend the wharf franchise of the San Pedro Dock Company for thirty years, as requested. The company has no franchise now held by the City Attorney.

To obtain a franchise that company will have to submit to the City of Los Angeles. It is also held that the claim of the company for reimbursement by the city for improvements is illusory.

Plan on Accraze.

After presenting his resolution yesterday asking the city to appropriate $25,000 to make homes and tileless ground for homeless and unemployed along the waterfront and on other empty areas belonging to the city.

Mr. Wheler asked the Public Service Committee to provide the Council with a list of all vacant lands owned by the municipality.

The request for the minor was referred to the Finance Committee.

Appeals Station Ordinances.

The Public Utilities Committee of the Council yesterday approved the ordinances of the Southern Pacific station of the new Southern Pacific station in San Francisco. The indignant refused. Then he conducted a series of humiliations at the same time made the wife of relatives.

Krautowitz induced his friend,

Ray Geller, to hold a trial in the

Vernon Court of Justice where,

according to Geller's own admission, he was her liquor. Upon Mrs. Krautowitz's return home with Geller, she was intoxicated and accused her husband of physical force, compelled his wife to drink more liquor, meantime

had a brief marriage. Mrs. Krautowitz says her husband only gave her $5.

REFUSED BY THE NURSE.

E. M. Barnes, a graduate of West Point, civil engineer, lawyer and poet, now patrolling the block, refers to install additional share houses that will accommodate a twenty-minute patrol. Tenants in the block have complained of conditions there and have asked the city for more protection.

Times' Midwinter Number

Southern California's Message to the World

First Forms Now Ready for the Press

The Greatest Special Edition of a Newspaper Ever Published in Western America

Complete in Six Magazine Sections

IT is the tale of the "Land o' Heart's Desire"—a graphic recital of the bulwark of mighty forces that is making of California, and especially Southern California, not only a "Land of Promise," but a "Land of Fulfilment"—a "paradise on the hither side the grave."

IT deals conservatively and convincingly with the stupendous development of the Southland. . . . It recites the story of the sensational unfoldment of Metropolitan Los Angeles. . . . It details golden opportunities in unnumbered fields of endeavor for breadwinner and capitalist. . . . It reviews the inconceivable wealth of natural resources tributary to Los Angeles. . . . It dwells at length upon the marvels of climate and scenery that make Southern California the "all-year outdoor playground" of health, wealth and pleasure-seeking America. . . . It enlarges upon the vast commercial and industrial expansion of recent years—the result of the splendid enterprise of the Southland's progressive, energetic citizens.

Nearly 200 Pages of Concise, Succinct, Encyclopedic, Reliable Information Concerning California. Issued in Permanent Magazine Form—Superbly Illustrated in Monochrome and Color Plates.

The circulation of THE TIMES MIDWINTER NUMBER is 200,000 copies. Approximate division: 60,000 copies to regular subscribers of the daily; 90,000 copies to persons in the East and Middle West who are clamoring for information relating to California; 50,000 to foreign investors who are seeking a profitable field for capital.

City Ha.

By the Western Sea. Land of the Great Southwest.

Always in the Lead.

IT IS not a matter of yesterday that the Great Southwest has been in the lead in animal and vegetable production, but this lead extends back to prehistoric times, away into the Pleistocene period. This is proved by the discovery of the bones of a mammoth elephant in the Brea deposits on the Rancho la Brea near Los Angeles. The bones of this mammoth beast are now being mounted in the Los Angeles County Museum of History, Science and Art, dedicated the other day out in Exposition Park. Lately in the same deposit was unearthed an old cypress tree supposed to have lain there for 300,000 years, and the elephant was before the tree. The Board of Supervisors was asked to appropriate $19 to buy wheelbarrows to transport the fossil remains to the museum. The imperial elephant when mounted will be about eighteen feet long and stand fifteen feet high. Its tusks measure from ten to fifteen feet in length.

Day of Road Construction.

THE people of Pomona are planning an automobile speedway from Ganesha Park to Lodi. It is planned to build a five-mile track to skirt the base of the foothills, running close to the Pacific Electric track. The cost is put at $40,000. Orange county has about completed its system of good roads, and is now planning to illuminate every mile of the course, probably using natural gas. It will be but a short period of time until all Southern California, and indeed nearly all the Great Southwest, will have roads as smooth as Broadway, New York, and lighted as brilliantly as the Champs Elysees in Paris.

Optimistic Keynote.

ANY slackness that exists in business in Los Angeles, throughout Southern California and all through the Great Southwest, is purely on the part of the little fellows. The big fellows who have proved their wisdom by doing big things in business and so growing big themselves have no thought of hesitating. Within recent weeks the Bryson apartments changed hands at $900,000, and almost simultaneously the Rancho Los Palos Verdes, lying between Redondo Beach and San Pedro Harbor, was sold to Frank A. Vanderlip, the great New York banker, for about $2,000,000. More recently a great tract of land in Imperial Valley has been secured by a Los Angeles syndicate, this transaction running also to about $2,000,000. Down near the coast in Los Angeles county a 550-acre ranch has been sold twice within a month, the last time at about $550,000. At Riverside a tract of 1120 acres has changed hands at $200,000. In smaller things an improved lot at Venice has been sold at $75,000, and as this is a trade in which city property of about the same amount was used the deal involves $150,000. The Los Angeles Railway Company is seeking permission to issue bonds in the amount of $23,500,000, of which $3,500,000 is to be used in extensions and betterments of the system. Among these is a plan to acquire a large piece of property at Jefferson street and Vermont avenue and to construct car barns, which will run to $250,000. Then $1,600,000 will be used for new equipment.

Actual Accomplishments.

THE paragraph above refers to plans well defined, carefully considered and sure to be carried out. There is nothing risked in assuring the accomplishment of these plans. The accomplishments of the year prove it. For eleven months of the year the building department of the city of Los Angeles issued 15,500 permits, costing very nearly $30,000,000, one of these permits being of last week and running to $350,000. In addition to the big real estate transactions itemized above there is to be added the Patterson ranch near Oxnard in Ventura county, consisting of 5700 acres, which is being subdivided into thirty to fifty-acre farms and put upon the market for small holders. The postoffice receipts are a sure index and accurate measure of growth. The receipts at the Los Angeles postoffice for November were 4.15 per cent. greater than for the corresponding month of last year, running in the last month to $166,503.09. At the harbor of Los Angeles there were landed in three days 20,000,000 feet of lumber, board measure, enough to construct a town of 2500 houses, sufficient to shelter about 10,000 people. In one day the receipts of lumber at the harbor amounted to 10,000,000 feet. The architects of Los Angeles report plans in hand which insure much activity for the immediate future. The construction of the Methodist Hospital on Hope street south of Twenty-eighth will be begun almost immediately, and this will cost $350,000. For the southeast corner of Pico and Main streets an immense hotel is planned, work to begin early in the year and the cost to run to $350,000. All through Southern California the same activity of actual achievement and of plans for the future is noted. At Glendale, for example, the building permits issued for November call for an expenditure of a little over $52,000, and the year's building already runs to $642,553.

Walnut Groves as Investments.

EAR Whittier recently a walnut grove consisting of ten acres sold at $11,000, another of eight acres for $12,600. The usual prices at which this kind of property changes hands, for groves well situated and in full bearing, range from $1000 to $1500 an acre. At Pomona the Walnut Growers' Association has recently marketed about thirty cars of nuts, the minimum car capacity being twelve tons. The growers will receive for their crop about $100,000. One grower has marketed seventy-five tons, for which his check will be for about $25,000. The prices were good this year, running for fancy budded nuts as high as 19 cents a pound. There is very little expense in the caring for a walnut grove, the biggest item being for gathering the crop, which is done on a piece-work basis—so much a sack. It is very questionable whether the world contains an agricultural industry that pays better for the same amount of trouble and risk than walnut-growing in Southern California.

Los Angeles Leads All.

MONG other crops that flourish abundantly under Southern California skies is that gathered by the tax collector. For the fifty-eight county governments in the State for the current fiscal year, these harvesters will gather in $38,695,140. This includes $1,244,755 to finance the Panama-Pacific Exposition. In everything Los Angeles county leads the State. The assessed valuation of the property in the county runs at $793,234,027. This makes it the richest county in the State, and its contribution to the tax collectors, including the Exposition tax, amounts to $5,585,433. A comparison with San Francisco shows that city and county to be assessed for $623,847,729, and the total tax for city, State and county government purposes there amounts to $11,839,432.

The Wealth of Alaska.

PACIFIC mining of gold in Alaska began in 1880. Since then the territory has yielded 7,488,491 fine ounces of the most precious metal, amounting in value to $154,800,875. As a by-product the mines have yielded 1,652,016 fine ounces of silver, commercially worth $960,473. In the year 1912 an estimate put the gold yield of the territory at close to $12,000,000. This production would be greatly increased if transportation facilities were provided to reach the interior and aid in the operation of the mines.

Salt River Valley.

FOR twelve months ending September 30, the reclamation canals and reservoirs in the Salt River Valley, Arizona, supplied water to 163,312 acres, divided into 2680 farms. The total crop yield is estimated at $4,552,875, or a little more than $28 an acre. The hay crop was worth a little less than $2,500,000, and the Egyptian-cotton crop covered 4544 acres. The cattle in the district number more than 40,000, and are valued at a little over $2,263,000. No wonder building at Phoenix flourishes, the year's building, numbering 297 residences, worth nearly $554,000.

A Southwestern Product.

IT WOULD be hard to place too much emphasis on the wealth contained in the clays and rocks of Southern California. Until not many years ago, nearly all the Portland cement used in the United States came from England and Germany. For example, in 1895 the importations amounted to 2,500,000 barrels, and 600,000 barrels were made in this country. In 1909 the importations had dropped to 550,000 barrels and the home production had increased to 61,300,000 barrels. It would be difficult if not indeed impossible to find another industry with such marvelous growth to its credit. Throughout all of the southern half of California and throughout the whole of the Great Southwest the people of the future must turn more and more to cement, clays and building stones for their building materials. The buildings will be more comfortable in a semi-tropic climate like ours than wooden structures of the very best make, and the money spent will all be kept at home.

More Coal Than Gold.

UNTIL 1912 New Mexico was one of the two States in the Rocky Mountain region, Wyoming being the other, which lay more claim to recognition as mining States by reason of their production of coal than by their output of precious and semiprecious metals. In 1912, however, owing to a marked increase in production, the value of the recoverable copper content of the ores mined in New Mexico exceeded the value of the coal mined. The increase in the copper production was due principally to the operations of one company mining with steam shovels a large acreage of low-grade deposits at Santa Rita. In 1911 the recoverable copper content of the ores mined in New Mexico was 4,057,040 pounds, valued at $507,130; in 1912 this product amounted to 34,030,964 pounds, valued at $5,615,109, the quantity in 1912 being approximately eight and one-half times and the value more than eleven times that of 1911. The coal production increased from 3,148,158 short tons, valued at $4,525,925, to 3,536,824 short tons, valued at $5,037,051.

The Raton district produces a coking coal of good grade, and extensive coking operations are carried on at Dawson, Gardner and Koehler. The other commercial mineral products of the State are gold, lead, silver, zinc, stone, clay products, fluorite, gypsum, iron ore, lime, mica, mineral waters, salt, sand and gravel, gems, and vanadium minerals. The total value of the mineral products of New Mexico increased from $8,176,229 in 1911 to $14,391,355 in 1912. [U. S. Geological Survey Bulletin.]

Honey from Poisonous Plants.

Honey is the sweet substance secreted by the nectariferous glands of flowers and extracted therefrom by the bee and deposited in the honeycomb. Among the more common honey-producing plants are the white clover, mustard, catnip, buckwheat and various flowers of shrubs and trees. Poisonous plants in bloom are also visited by the bee, and discussion at various times has arisen over the toxicity of the honey derived from such sources. According to the Pharmaceutical Era, it is not probable that honey from a poisonous plant is toxic. While it is true that the United States Dispensatory contains the statement, based on Bley, that Datura Stramonium is a plant which furnishes poisonous honey, and Tschirch mentions the species in a list of such plants, Deane, after a series of observations on great tracts of stramonium plants in England, found that bees do not visit the plants. The nectaries are situated at the bottom of a long tubular corolla, and can be reached only by some butterflies with long proboscis, by nocturnal insects, and by small beetles. The stramonium culture has existed for many years in the presence of swarms of bees, without any complaint being made about their honey. Bley's statement is in turn based on a consular report from Trebizond, in or around the year 1885, to the effect that honey from that city was unfit for consumption, and that the toxic principle came from the stramonium flowers which grew abundantly on the seacoast. Thresh could not obtain any alkaloid from the samples of honey submitted, and Stockmann found that extracts from the honey had no mydriatic effect. Thresh was of the opinion that Azalea pontica was responsible for any toxic action, a point fully confirmed later. There is no good evidence that nectar from a poisonous plant is toxic. Experience even shows the contrary.

Long Beach is planning a building $650,000 for harbor improvement. The industrial city of Torrance is carrying a public library building costing $20,000. John S. Mitchell of the Belmont section has bought an apartment hotel in the Crown Hill section at a cost of $20,000. The Women's Club at Hollywood is building a new clubhouse to cost $20,000. A lot 50x150 feet, corner of Belmont and Flower streets, improved with a flat building, has been sold at $20,000. An eleven-room residence, with 426 South Oxford Boulevard, has been sold at $17,500. The lot is 65x100 feet, and house contains three bathrooms. The State of Arizona is one of the copper stock of the world, with 1,000,000 pounds a day.

FRESH REPORTS OF PROGRESS IN THE ADVANCING SOUTHWEST.

While actual business is not running as indicated by bank clearings, building permits and mercantile reports back locally and country-wide, yet the whole tone of sentiment is optimistic. This is particularly true in the Great Southwest and along the Western Sea, where the consensus of public opinion is that nothing can long stand at any time, and particularly with the opening of the canal and the great opportunities now in sight.

At Oceanside a contract for a sewer system has been let at $20,000.

The Santa Fe Railroad Company placed an order for thirty-five electric locomotives at a cost of $500,000.

At Escondido, street grading on 600 has been completed.

At Santa Cruz, a bond election has been carried for $165,000 for a pier.

Around Heber, in Imperial valley, dairy cows number 6000 and the planting for next year will add 2000 to the area of last year.

The real estate men of Long Beach are planning a building for community use $200,000.

The new bridge over the Arroyo Seco connecting the cities of Los Angeles and Pasadena has been completed at a cost of $200,000.

The Pacific Electric Company is planning an interlocking plant at the Glendale near Cucamonga to cost $200,000.

At Tucson, Ariz., the Tucson Foundation is preparing to plant 100,000 Egyptian cotton, and on the San Tan ranch in the vicinity fifty head of Rochester, N. Y., are about to be sown on 600 acres.

EAGLES have a very imperfect language, no science to speak of and no schools worthy of the name. Our human brethren have languages wonderful in their construction, sciences marvelous in their development and schools numbered by millions, ranging from kindergartens, where tots are taught to dress their dolls, to universities where the knowledge of all things in heaven and earth, and in the waters beneath the earth are studied, their properties considered and the laws of their being explained. These are the brain factories of the race and the products are high-brows of many species.

It was away back in the last century that an English statesman boasting of his country invented the phrase, "the schoolmaster is abroad." In half a hundred countries now schoolmasters and schoolmistresses are almost as numerous as ants in an anthill or bees in a hive. The young human begins to study from books at about the age of 6 and continues to devote most of his time to the study of books until he is about 20. Long, long ago a philosopher of the day made the remark "of the making of books there is no end."

Schoolmasters and schoolmistresses, schools of every degree and colleges of every grade are all great things in human life. Books figure marvelously among mankind, and intelligence is regarded as the greatest asset of a man or a woman. There are all kinds of aristocracies among men, and perhaps the most scientific one is the aristocracy of intellect, or of education. The aristocracy of birth is an accident, so far as the individual is concerned, an aristocracy of wealth is a vulgar thing, brutal in its sentiments and in no wise uplifting. Wealth is often a matter of chance and not infrequently a matter of plunder. It is often a matter of inheritance. An intellectual or educational aristocracy is an individual thing, being a direct, personal asset of its possessor. It requires as a foundation a gift in an intellect with capacity to learn. On this foundation the superstructure is built by painful effort, laboriously applied, continuously carried on and every step upward is an achievement of personal individual toil.

The Eagle has an unbounded admiration for human intelligence, and for the schools and colleges of his lords and masters, the human race. Yet, the Eagle is at all times astonished to find that his lords and masters have, after all, made such a poor use of their God-given faculties, of their opportunities to acquire intelligence and of the use they make of the knowledge they possess.

One of your poets boasts of his own generation as "the heir of all the ages, in the foremost ranks of time." This inheritance reaches back to the foundation of the hills and to the birth of the mountains, far beyond primitive man and even going back of the missing link. Aeons and ages have passed since human intellect first began to store up its treasures for the use of the sons of men to follow from cycle to cycle of time. Each generation has made its additions to these treasures and fattening upon that stored up by the past has added to the total sum of human science to be used by all that follow.

Surely that treasure-house is full now, or at least its treasures are vast and multifrom.

With all this treasure of the past and with the use of such a wonderful language as the English, for example, and with all the various schools of my own country, the Eagle Country among all nations, one might expect a little capacity of clear thinking, reaching logical conclusions on the part of the average American citizen. Well, the Eagle does not undervalue the comparative accomplishments of Americans, but he could very well wish to see a little more capability of weighing facts and arriving at just conclusions.

These we love most we are least inclined to pardon if they show any very great lack of the highest human virtues. So the Eagle is often "as mad as the devil" (please pardon the vulgar expression) when he sees Americans lacking in, not the knowledge of facts, but the capacity of weighing facts logically and reaching just conclusions.

How many men live and die on prejudices! Prejudice, my friends, is a child of ignorance, and every person, no matter what his knowledge of books, what the aggregation of facts in his mind, who is ruled by prejudice is ruled by ignorance. Of course none of you will acknowledge that prejudice sways your mind in reaching conclusions and you are all very much offended by the adjective ignorant, is applied to you.

Let us see for a minute. There are two things that should, and that generally do, call for the highest intellectual ability of an individual. These are the governing of the country and religion. Now, where is the American citizen who will get up and dare look the Eagle in the eye and say there is no prejudice in his voting, in his estimate of political candidates or his judgment on political parties? Where is the man that will similarly stand up and dare tell the Eagle to his face that he is free from prejudice in his religious conceptions?

The Eagle has sat upon the ridgepole of the building where elections were conducted hundreds of times, has heard the conversation outside of the polling place and read the thoughts of the voters as they stamped their ballots. Now the deliberate judgment of the Eagle is that nine out of every ten of those voters were influenced more or less by gross prejudices, founded upon lamentable ignorance of the facts in making out their tickets. The Eagle is old enough to have seen several generations of voters, and he has come to the conclusion that the son of a Democrat will be a Democrat, and his son will be a Democrat, and that, metaphorically speaking, Democrats of Gen. Jackson's time are still voting the Democratic ticket. And this, in spite of the fact, as plain as the sun in the heavens to the Eagle, that the Democracy taught by Jackson and those of his time is no more like that of Mr. Wilson the President, Mr. Bryan the Secretary of State, or the other Wilson, Secretary of Commerce and Labor. Chalk is like cheese, and the mud clay like gold. There is no more stone in the Democracy of President Wilson than that of President Jefferson, than that between soapsuds and good sweet milk.

I am not saying that there are no Americans who vote in the same way from a Greek who went about the market place with a brick in his hand as changing things that ought to be done. A Democrat will stand for Republican above paragraph.

Religion? Here prejudice rules absolutely than in politics. It is that words exercise such a tyranny on the human mind. Most people who speak of religion mean a formalization, a creed made up of philosophical situations. They fight about such the trinity of which none of them has any conception and discuss the matter as to whether it is a transubstantiation, a real presence or a memorial feast. That were religion. They talk of it as the intellectual acceptance of declaration of logically-constructed philosophical and not religious

THE LANCER

STILL they come, these glowing stories of heroism whereby the women and children must be saved first in any calamity. And he is a brave man who would dispute the absolute rectitude of such a maxim—publicly, in his own person. The old doctrine of chivalry demands that in a crisis a perfectly sane man shall go back on all his principles and beliefs, his innermost convictions, and pretend, in the hour of stress, that he honestly considers women more valuable than men.

The fact that so many men are able to perform this incredible feat speaks much for the power of tradition. The average man must act thus heroically much more for the look of the thing than for any serious opinions he may hold on the subject.

It cannot be that he really stands convinced that the ordinary average woman has more rights to life than he has, but rather that he cannot brave the scorn of breaking the conventions.

Saint and Villain.

BUT aside from that there is the much more serious question as to which of the two is the more prepared to die. Now, as any suffragette will tell you, woman is far and away more collectively virtuous and sinless than man. Likewise there is a decided tendency in modern writers to insist upon the importance of our souls, with an all-around insinuation that women possess a very much higher standard of soul than mundane man. I should not be surprised to learn that this is true, for the modern woman is a supreme egotist, which is indisputable evidence that the self-interested one has discovered that he or she has a soul which must be considered respectfully at all costs.

Very well then: Woman being the more virtuous and the more soulful, it is only logical to suppose that she is the more fit to die. Why the average villainous male should be expected to forfeit his life voluntarily in the midst of his sins, sever his puny undeveloped soul from his mortal coil reeking with iniquity at the very moment when he most appreciates the necessity for reform, is difficult to fathom. Humbly he knows that heaven is not for him, yet he is expected to take all risks, inflammable and explosive, while condemning an unsullied soul to live for a longer spell in a wicked, uncongenial world.

Of course the theory is all wrong. Perhaps this modern movement whereby women ridicule chivalry and make bold claim to physical and mental equality and moral superiority with man, will readjust things more equitably. If so, I trust it may happen ere I am wrecked at sea. Otherwise, while doubtless standing aside with what grace I can muster, I shall certainly lodge a strong mental protest against the absurdity of saving her and losing me.

Perpetuation of Species.

IWOULD be prepared to make a reservation in favor of mothers, since that is the one function in which woman excels at present. But I should want evidence. If she is a mother already, well and good, but I should want guarantees that any sinless lady whose life took precedence of mine was indeed a potential mother and not a maternity shirker.

For the rest I am prepared to concede the sinless sex not only equality but superiority. I see in a recent pamphlet issued by the Women's Union that the average woman's life is one of unselfish devotion and underpaid labor. Too bad. How can she wish to go on living under such conditions; none but the sinful can exist comfortably in a sinful world.

The Economic Question.

IT MUST be particularly galling for a fine healthy male in such countries as Germany and England, where the female preponderates by three to one, to be called upon to chivalrously sacrifice his life that some entirely superfluous woman may be saved to the nation. In both of those countries they are desperate to know what to do with their gentle, superfluous ineptitudes. Boarding-houses and cheap lodgings reek with them, almshouses account for thousands, yet they can't even be induced to emigrate to some country where women are really wanted, having no backbone, no enterprise, no capacity, no skill. These dear creatures are quite useless and inefficient and life holds nothing for them. They eke out a hopeless existence, trying in their pathetic incapable way to augment the meager incomes conceded by over-burdened males of the family. Yet in a fire, in a wreck, in an earthquake, these are the lives that must be saved first, at the cost of the very males who are bearing the economic burdens in most cases and certainly at the cost of the lives of some very valuable potential husbands.

Portrait Advertising.

THERE is something rather sublime about the man who can advertise his wares with a fancy portrait of himself. Pill merchants and fake doctors have done it for ages and I think the majority of us have come to associate the portrait advertisement with specious remedies for physical disorders.

But now no less a celebrity than G. K. Chesterton is advertising his latest play, "Magic," with a portrait of himself on all the London billboards and even on the letter paper used in theatrical correspondence. And really, you know, G. K. C., while owning a lot of face, is not at all strong in actual masculine beauty.

And now this dubious method of advertising grows apace and every man who wants to sell underwear, canned soups, patent garters, garden seeds, or furniture, or who desires to loan you money on your note or hand alone, or to sell you his voice, his imagination or his mental incapacity hastens to adorn his advertising space with a picture of the face "wot dun it."

Does this sort of advertisement really cut any ice? A most generous gentleman, named Abrahams, has recently sent me a

caption that reads:

Among the Moros GIRLS BOUGHT AND SOLD TO FILL THE HAREMS.

DATTO UTTO AND HIS CRUELTY—EATEN TO DEATH BY ANTS—SOME TEN-DOLLAR MORO BRIDES—HOW MOHAMMEDAN THRIVES IN CHINA, INDIA, PERSIA AND NORTHERN AFRICA.

From Our Own Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The government is again having trouble with our Mohammedan cousins. The Moros in places are up in arms against the new laws, and are openly and secretly fighting the regulations as to slavery. There is no doubt that slavery exists not only in the Moro country, but also here and there in other parts of the islands, and it will be a long time before it can be wiped out. I do not mean peonage, or debt bondage. That is common in all the farming localities. I mean actual slavery, such as existed when we took hold of the islands. I traveled through Mindanao and the Sulu archipelago when we were just beginning to pacify that part of the Philippines. I then found slaves everywhere, and once had a chance to buy four likely Mohammedan children for $50. The owner was a Filipino woman who lived several hundred miles west of Zamboanga, at Davao, under the shadow of Mt. Apo. She had the little ones brought for me out into the sunlight and I made a photograph of them. There were three boys and a girl ranging in age from 9 to 12 years. The girl was the oldest, and, as is common in tropical countries, at that age she was almost ready for marriage. She was half naked, her only garment being a wide strip of dirty cotton wrapped around her waist and falling to her knees. As I looked at her, her fat, old mistress seductively said: "Mucha buena," or very good. She told me such a girl ought to be worth $25 of any man's money, and seemed surprised that I did not jump at the bargain.

Dean Worcester says he was offered slave girls on the island of Tawi Tawi for fifteen bushels of rice, and that on many of the islands he could buy girls of 15 for $3 apiece. A captain of the army told me he had recently bought a slave girl for $10 and given her freedom. This sale was made out of pity. The captain, who was engaged to a very pretty girl in the United States, sympathized with the female slave, who although in love with a young man of her village, was about to be sold into the harem of an old Moro chieftain. The girl said she would rather die than submit, and the captain bought her and gave her to the man of her choice.

Another man whom I know, an officer of our army, saved a slave girl from death. She had angered her master, who was one of the Dattos, and had run off from the harem and thrown herself at the feet of the officer, saying the Datto had threatened to kill her. The officer made the Datto promise to spare her life, to agree to bring her once a week to his quarters to show that she was still living. This was done for several weeks and then the girl disappeared. Whether the Datto killed her or sold her to one of her friends was never known.

A few years ago the Sultan of Sulu got up a new code of laws which he sent to Manila for approval. Many of them related to slavery and to the treatment of the women of the harem. Our government does not like to be mixed up in religious matters, and according to the treaties we allow the Moros to worship practically as they please. By the Mohammedan religion every follower of the prophet has the right to four wives, and all he has to do, if he wishes to change, is to say to such of his wives as he does not like three times: "I divorce you! I divorce you! I divorce you!"

This means that they must go and not return, and he can then fill up the quota with a fresh assortment. According to this code the relations between the Moros and the slaves were plainly laid down. It was provided that if a slave laid his hand upon a free married woman with any improper intention he should be the property of the woman's husband, and also that if a free man laid his hand upon a married slave woman he should be fined $100. If the slave woman informed us to the outrage the fine was to be divided between her and the state, but if it was detected by others the whole fine went to the state.

Another clause in the code provides as to the sale of slaves and others as to debt slavery. Among the latter regulations was one that if a man could not pay his debts his family should belong to the debtor until paid, but that this slavery could not last more than three years. A third law related as to runaway slaves, and others to stolen slaves and crimes committed by slaves.

This code was turned down by our government, but it shows that the Moros still regard slavery as a divine right, notwithstanding their American rulers.

I met many of the dattos during my stay in the Philippines, and I saw something of their wives and slaves. The women are not veiled, as in other Mohammedan countries, and both wives and slaves go about barefaced. I was told that a datto was considered rich according to the number of slaves he owned, and that children were stolen from other tribes to be kept as slaves. Some of the dattos were notorious for their cruelty in regard to their slaves.

I met an old villain named Utto, who gave unheard-of punishments for minor offenses.

Slaves who ran away from him were often punished by cutting the tendons below the knee, so that they could walk only with difficulty and could be easily caught if they tried again to escape. This man had a slave girl whom he disliked. He bound her over a place swarming with red ants and she was bitten to death. Utto had a man tied naked to the trunk of a tree, where he was roasted by the sun during the day and eaten by the mosquitoes at night. This torment was terrible. And a calf brought in by our soldiers for slaughter and left tied that way died in one day.

Utto had also stocks in which he left people to die. One of our officers found a Moro dead in the stocks. He was lying there, no one having dared to remove the corpse.

Some of the above instances I give on the authority of a Jesuit priest who was traveling among the Moros just about the time we took hold of the islands. He wrote about them to one of the generals of the United States army and the latter included them in his report to the government. This man described other punishments meted out by the chiefs of these Mohammedan Moros. He says that they had one way of tantalizing their enemies. They would tie a man in the river where the tides came in in such a way that he could just escape drowning by standing on his tiptoes and thus keep the water from entering his nostrils and mouth. At times of extraordinary tides such men were drowned.

One of our American officials says that he saw a Moro in Jolo who always wore a bandage over his mouth. This was to hide from public view its deformity, which had been caused, not by nature, but by a datto to whom he had spoken disrespectfully. The datto ordered that the man's mouth be split and opened to the edges of the jawbones. This was done with a kris and it was then left to heal. Strange to say, the man lived.

It is strange that slavery cannot be put down in the Philippines. The Spaniards attempted it 300 years ago, and there have always been laws against it. One reason for the trouble with the Moros is that it is hard to distinguish between the wife and the slave. The Moros believe that they have the right to as many wives as they can support and, as I have said, the Koran gives them four. Frequently the chiefs have but one real wife and the rest are slaves whose children do not inherit rank or titles. Some of these wives are right good-looking. I remember seeing the favorite of Datto Mandi's harem at Zamboanga. The Datto was almost 50 years of age, but this girl was 18, and she would have been a beauty almost anywhere. She was tall for a Moro, as plump as a partridge and of rich mahogany brown. She had fine eyes and large, sensual lips. She was dressed in a kimono when I saw her while I made a photograph of the two.

I asked something as to the customs of marriage and was told it was largely a question of bargain and sale. The husband pays for his bride, and at the time we took hold of the Sulus the average price for a good-looking girl was $10 in silver, a water buffalo worth about $15, and 500 pieces of rice cake, worth 1 cent each. Of the money paid $2 went to the girl and the rest to her parents.

The Moro marriage ceremonies usually take place at the house of the bride. They are performed by a priest, who asks the man if he takes the woman for his wife. Of course, he says yes. The same question is then put to the woman, but she is supposed to let her relatives reply for her. After this the groom presses his thumb, which has been blessed by the priest, against the forehead of the bride. He then mixes up a chew of betel nut for her and throws it down at her feet. She pretends not to notice it, but one of her friends picks it up and gives it to her, and later on she chews it in secret. After this comes a wedding feast and then the family of the groom leaves and the husband and wife start married life. The wife has but few rights which her husband is bound to respect, but he has to live with her, and if he stays away for more than three months at a time she can demand a divorce.

The Mohammedans of the Philippines number about 250,000, and they are just about one-thousandth part of the Mohammedan population of the world. Few people have any idea of the extent of the region. There are about 250,000,000 millions of the prophet. Mohammedanism is the principal faith in a great part of Asia and Africa, and it has millions of adherents in Europe. There are 600,000 Mohammedans in Austria-Hungary and almost as many in had a hair which I was assured came from Mohammed's mustache. The hair was red as that of my own head, and the man told me that Mohammed had red hair and a red beard. It is for this reason that many Mohammedans dye their hair and whiskers a bright red. They want to pass their way into heaven by having parts of the same color as Mohammed. Indeed, it seemed to me that I was treated with respect in the mosque on account of the red color of my own mustache.

The most beautiful mosque in the world is the Taj Mahal, at Agra. It was built by the same man who erected the Jamia Mosque. The Taj Mahal is not so large, but it was far more costly and its wonderful workmanship is still the admiration of the world. The building stands upon a mosaic platform of black and white marble, covering about six acres, at the corners of which are high marble towers in which the Mohammedan priests stand morning and evening and shout out the calls to prayer. The mosque itself, which is also a tomb, is of the purest white marble, ending in a bubble-like dome that seems to float in the air over it. Its sides are of lacework of the purest white marble, and the interior contains enough of the marble lacework to build a fence around the grounds of the White House at Washington. It is a strange commentary upon the wonders of true love that this building was built by a Mohammedan sultan in honor of his wife. The sultan's name was Shah Jehan. He had over a hundred wives, but he was especially fond of only one, and when she died he erected this building to her memory. He drafted the unbelievers among his subjects and set them to work upon it. There were 20,000 laborers, and it is said that it took them seventeen years to complete the construction. They got only their food for their pay.

Going westward from India, one finds many Mohammedans in Persia and in Asia Minor, and especially in Arabia. It is now possible to go to Mecca, in Central Arabia, where Mohammed was born, by railroad, and in the same way you can visit Medina, where his bones rest in a coffin which is supposed to be suspended half way between the floor and the roof by invisible strings. Hundreds of thousands of Mohammedans make pilgrimages to Mecca and Medina every year, and from now there will be a large accession to the number by these new railroads. When I was at Khartoum, in the Soudan, a thousand miles or so south of the Mediterranean Sea, I was told that they were running pilgrim trains from that country to the Red Sea in order to accommodate the worshipers who wished to cross from Port Soudan to Jeddah, in Arabia, and thence go on to Mecca. There will be an enormous traffic from Asia Minor to Mecca. The road runs through Damascus and along the edges of Palestine, and people will come from European and Asiatic Turkey to go by rail to worship at the tomb of Mohammed.

Speaking of Jeddah, that place until now has been the chief Arabian starting point of these Mohammedan pilgrimages. It lies half way up the coast of the Red Sea and within a few days' walk of Mecca. Outside the town, under a mosque, is the spot where Eve is said to be buried, and not far in the interior is a mountain which the Mohammedans say was Adam's home after he was cast out of Paradise. They think the Garden of Eden was in heaven, and say that when Adam and Eve were thrust forth they dropped down to earth. Adam landed on a mountain in Ceylon and crossed to the mainland of Asia upon the chain of islands which lie between it and Hindustan, the chain being known to this day as Adam's Bridge. Eve was dropped down at Jeddah, and Adam for his sin spent 200 years in looking for her. At last the two came together in Arabia and they lived at Jeddah until they died. Eve's tomb is 400 feet long. I suppose she filled it, for "there were giants in those days."

I have seen a good deal of the Mohammedans of Africa. They are found by the millions in Egypt, and, indeed, the greater part of northern Africa is inhabited by them. Among the most fanatical are those of Morocco, the most of whom acknowledge no allegiance to Turkey nor to the Sultan at Constantinople, although he claims to be the head of the Mohammedan world. There are Mohammedans throughout the Sahara Desert, and I found millions of them in Algeria and Tunisia. I traveled among them in Tripoli, where the people are also fanatical, and saw something of them in Zanzibar and in parts of South Africa.

The Egyptians are almost altogether Mohammedans, and some of the finest mosques of the world are in Cairo. There is one which is made of alabaster, on the edge of a court in which is a great alabaster fountain, where the worshipers bathe their feet and hands before they go in to pray.

Another fine mosque is in Jerusalem. It stands on the site of Solomon's Temple, and it is impossible to enter it without a permit from the Mohammedan governor of the Holy City. In that mosque is the rock upon which Abraham built his altar upon which he was about to sacrifice Isaac when the Angel of the Lord called out to him to withhold his hand. The mosque is called the Dome of the Rock, and the Mohammedans say that the Angel Gabriel will stand there when he blows his last trumpet. Then all the people of the world will come to Jerusalem, and Jehovah, sitting upon his throne upon this rock, will separate the sheep from the goats. Some Mohammedans say that the whole human race will have to walk a tight rope or thin wire which will then be stretched across the Valley of Jehoshaphat, and at one end of this Mohammed will sit. As the people go over the righteous will be upheld by the angels from falling. They will cross to the Mount of Olives and thence go to heaven. The wicked will be unsupported. They will slip off into the valley and descend straight to hell.

His Honor Sits. By Charles W. Robson.

A SCHEME FAILS.

JUDGE ATWATER'S scheme was impeded. It deserved success. If the artist had combined with his artistic temperament more careful business habits, and if His Honor's double had only not—

"Tremptly at 3 o'clock this afternoon you begin the sittings for your portrait," said Mrs. Augustus Arlington Atwater to her at the breakfast table the first morning of His Honor's summer vacation.

"My dear," began her husband, "this is the first I have heard of this portrait business, and I have planned—"

"Whatever you may have planned," interposed the imperious dame, "can well be postponed. An appointment with the celebrated M. Bois de la Tour can not be postponed. This great artist is making a very short stay in the city. He is taking orders from very few highly favored patrons. It is only after much persuasion and an offer of a very large recompense that I secured his services. Perkins, you may now retire to the library." This to the butler, who had been serving the breakfast. "And," said the queen with an air of finality, "I'll say, an engagement with M. Bois de la Tour is one to be kept. I will escort you to his studio at the appointed time."

It was often said about town that Judge Atwater ruled from the bench at the Courthouse, and that Mrs. Augustus Arlington Atwater ruled from her throne at their home; and that, though His Honor's decisions were sometimes reversed by a higher court, from the lips of Mrs. Augustus Arlington Atwater there was no appeal. It had even seriously been asserted that if Mrs. Augustus Arlington Atwater should say to her husband, "Precisely at 10 this evening we shall set out for the moon," His Honor, willy nilly, would have made his preparations for the trip.

The last assertion is no doubt a gross misrepresentation of the facts. However, in the matter of sitting for his portrait, Judge Atwater yielded to his wife's command, and I once found them at the studio of M. Bois de la Tour.

Mrs. Augustus Arlington Atwater posed for him, gracefully waving aside all suggestions from the artist, arranged with great care the folds of the judicial robe, ordered the artist to produce a bright, intellectual, cheerful smile, and finally, having seen the picture satisfactorily under way, majestically withdrew to wield her scepter at a meeting of the "Votes for Women Club." Relaxed at the commanding presence of his queen, His Honor's "bright, cheerful smile" gradually gives place to one of quite a different sort. He feels bored. He shows appointed if anything should prevent you from painting my portrait. You shall receive ample recompense for any loss of time which may have been occasioned by my—lack of interest." Thus speaking, His Honor, knowing how much can be accomplished by the persuasion which takes the form of something substantial from a full pocketbook, slips a twenty dollar bill into the artist's hand, and the latter, somewhat mollified, returns to his easel. Refreshed by his nap and frightened by M. Bois de la Tour's threat, Judge Atwater stoically attempts to do all that is required of him.

Near the end of the sitting, a driver, strikingly like His Honor in every detail, came into the studio to deliver a package. Like a flash it occurred to the judge that his double might be hired to sit in his place.

"Young man," said he to the driver, "are you very busy at present?"

"I've been kept going pretty lively for some time, Judge, but I am to have a vacation. It begins tomorrow."

"You are just the man I'm looking for!" exclaimed His Honor enthusiastically. "How would you like to earn $5 every afternoon during your vacation by sitting in this chair and wearing this robe for about three hours?"

"I should certainly jump at the chance to make money so easily," replied the driver excitedly.

The matter was quickly settled. His Honor was to sit while his features were being sketched, and for the rest of the portrait the driver would answer every purpose. Mrs. Augustus Arlington Atwater would never know that the judicial garment, when being sketched, was not covering His Honor's generous proportions.

One afternoon near the end of the week during which Judge Atwater had enjoyed quite unbeknown to his imperious queen, golf, automobiling, fishing, and real rambles in the woods (not dreams of them,) the driver arrived at the artist's studio and found it deserted. M. Bois de la Tour had been forcibly detained at his hotel by a bevy of admiring women. The driver arrayed himself in His Honor's robes, and then, to while away the time until the artist should be released, picked up a book from the table. Great was his astonishment to find underneath it a large roll of bills. Temptation innocently to examine the money was natural. Temptation to appropriate the same naturally followed. And the roll was just finding its way into the driver's pocket when the door opened and M. Bois de la Tour, having finally, cruelly and with difficulty, wrested himself from the bevy, entered the room. An instant later the driver was darting out of the back door, the artist at his heels, the latter yelling at the top of his little high-pitched voice:

"Voleur! Voleur! Arretez le voleur!"

A judge tearing madly through the streets, hatless and with robes flying, and pursued by a wildly excited and screaming Frenchman, is an entertaining spectacle not to be missed; and it quickly draws a miscellaneous crowd into its wake. Small boys on wheels; small boys on foot; hobbler hobbling hastily in hobble skirts; hobbler hobbling with more speed in slit skirts; drivers whipping up their horses; chauffeurs whirling their machines about most dangerously; all join in the race intent upon being present at the interesting moment of capture. At a street corner a dog obstructs, for one brief instant, the fugitive's flight. There is a loud yelp, and all the canines prowling in the vicinity come scampering up to learn the cause thereof. A moment later the thief falls into the arms of a policeman.

Why need it have pleased fate that a certain great lady should be returning from a lecture on "How to Manage Our Husbands" at this particular time and by this particular street; that the miscellaneous conglomeration of humanity should have brought her limousine to a standstill at this particular corner; and that said limousine should have arrived on the spot just at the particular moment when the arrest is made and the culprit is handcuffed and dragged away through the crowd? Mrs. Augustus Arlington Atwater (for she it was,) greatly incensed that the progress of her automobile has been impeded, raises her lorgnette, gazes, gasps—and, for the first time in her life, faints.

The next afternoon His Honor sits.

Industrious Actors.

When Miss Marlowe and Mr. Sothern are preparing their New York productions, writes W. P. Dodge in the December Strand, they rehearse them for four weeks in the summer. They begin at 9 o'clock rehearsing one play, then have a meal. After the meal they begin again, on the same play, if necessary, or else on another one. When that is finished, another meal, and then another play. They are in the theater from 9 in the morning till 2 or 3 o'clock the next morning. Miss Marlowe and Mr. Sothern are kept up by the purpose they have ahead of them. But the stage often looks like a battlefield. The actors and actresses fall right down on the boards and go to sleep, and remain stretched out all about the stage. But for the snores you would take them for dead soldiers. Having no particular interest in the work, it is just work to them. But Miss Marlowe and Mr. Sothern keep it up every day and every night for four weeks, and never feel any the worse for it.

wadded the stockings into as small a roll as possible and tried to push them into the tiny inside pocket of her coat—but the contrary things refused to be shoved. If only they weren't her very best she would throw them away!

Again there was no alternative. Haddie Ann unbuttoned her coat, and pulling a pin from behind the lapel, fastened the folded nylons to the belt of her skirt. She buttoned her coat and straightened her hat, then picked her purse and gloves up from the chair and stalked past several staring sisters. When she reached the elevator Haddie Ann was grinning foolishly to herself. Behind that grin was a young volcano of mirth. She raised her twinkling eyes to the elevator shaft. "Oh, Fate," she cried, "what next?"

Downstairs she stopped at the embroidery counter and bought thread for the cross-stitch towel she was making for Aunt Lizzie's hope chest. After that she went back up the street to the shoe store.

Half an hour later, Haddie Ann came out of the shoe store with a precious bundle held tightly under one protecting arm and a great feeling of satisfaction in her heart.

To get the car that went to Peggy's she must cross the busy street. After waiting patiently till the traffic man blew his whistle and the automobiles slowed up grudgingly, Haddie Ann hurried across. In hurrying, she stumbled over the car track, and the stubby little pin that held the thick folds of its burden to Haddie Ann's belt let go suddenly, and just as she reached the curb the stockings fell with a gloomy flutter into the street.

They both clutched at the fallen pair—Haddie Ann and the young gentleman. Their heads came together with an unromantic crash, and Haddie Ann scrambled on to the curb with a gasp.

The young man calmly picked up Haddie Ann's discarded hosiery and handed them to her. "Business good?" he queried meaningfully.

Haddie Ann had meant to apologize and say "Thank you," but something in the young man's tone crippled the glorious spirit of Christmas that had been welling up in her heart since the holidays began. Her dark eyes snapped as she said freezing, "That's my business."

The young man smiling indifferently, stepped over to the corner and bought a paper from the blind man there. Haddie Ann stood and awkwardly held the circumstantial evidence of her guilt, then with a "give up" sigh she thrust them under the edge of the paper around her slippers.

They hailed the same car. Haddie Ann sat down outside next to a shopping-worn woman, and the young man took a seat directly in front of her. When they had gone about a block he unfolded his paper and began to read. One glaring column seemed to interest him particularly. Haddie Ann could only read the headlines over one of his broad shoulders:

"Detectives on Trail.
Hard-up Females Collect
Xmas Gifts for Bogus Family."

Haddie Ann sniffed contemptuously. He needn't think he was making her squirm. Her conscience was clear—very clear. Nevertheless, when the young man alighted a street before Peggy's, Haddie Ann gave a deep sigh of relief.

A little later as she was taking off her hat and coat in Peggy's little pink room, the sense of the ridiculous struck Haddie Ann. Her eyes danced, her lips smiled, and the little crippled Christmas spirit within threw away its crutch and hopped for joy. "He thought I was a shoplifter!" she chuckled. "He thought I was a shoplifter—oh, it's too funny!"

Then she ran downstairs and chattered and jabbered with the rest of the girls on Peggy's side porch.

During the meeting they managed to squeeze in the business of the day. It was decided that their annual box to the Orphans' Home should outdo anything that had gone before and that every girl should begin right away to gather in from her dearest friends outgrown children's clothing and outcast toys.

Haddie Ann was all enthusiasm. "Girls," she cried. "I know what I'll do. I'll stop at Mrs. Martin's on the way home. She'll probably have loads of little Frankie's things that she can't use any more."

"Good idea, Had," Peggy approved, as she bit her thread in two. "Maybe you'll get a glimpse of that wonderful nephew of hers from 'Noo Yohk.'"

"I'd rather defer that pleasure till tomorrow night, Peg."

"Well, just so you get clothes and jack-in-the-boxes for our orphans, we don't care," Peggy said, laughing.

So, after the meeting, instead of going straight home Haddie Ann went by Mrs. Martin's. She hesitated a moment before she rang the door-bell. There was a long pause; then the door was opened slowly by a tall, gray-haired woman whose black, unfriendly eyes pierced Haddie Ann through and through.

"Is Mrs. Martin at home?"

"No, Mrs. Martin is not here," the lady said stiffly, and was about to close the door.

"I'm—I'm a friend of hers and we—we we're getting up a box for the—"

A queer look came into the lady's eyes. "Well, I declare!" she exclaimed, "step right in."

Haddie Ann, wondering a little at this sudden cordiality, obeyed. As soon as she was across the threshold, the lady turned quickly and locked the front door. Holding the key triumphantly in one hand, she said: "Just walk right into the drawing-room while I go upstairs and phone the authorities that at least one of those designing females is caught."

"But—" Haddie Ann sputtered indignantly.

"Do as I tell you," the lady commanded, as she gave Haddie Ann a little shove toward the room beyond. Then raising her voice, she called excitedly: "John, oh, John! See that the woman in the drawing-room doesn't escape—she's come after donations!"

Suddenly Haddie Ann grasped the situation. What was she to do? Mrs. Martin's sister was already far down the hall, scolding a lazy central. She ran over to the bookcase. Her photograph had always stood propped against the blue and white pitcher—but today it was not there. Haddie Ann's shoulders drooped, and she whispered wonderingly to herself: "What next, Fate—what next?"

She knew then that some one had entered the room. Turning, she looked straight into the puzzled gray eyes of the young man whose head had crashed with hers only a few hours before.

"Well," John remarked gravely, "so we meet again, eh?"

Haddie Ann, hugging her bronze shoes close, felt like a little commoner before a Supreme Judge on the bench, but she kept on staring at the good-looking easterner with big, appealing eyes. She could think of nothing to say.

The young man watched the end of his cigar intently while he slowly flicked the ashes on to the rough stove hearth. Then he looked at Haddie Ann. "Want to go?" he asked quietly.

Haddie Ann nodded.

So Mrs. Martin's nephew flung open the French windows leading to the side yard.

"All right," he said, "here's your chance."

Haddie Ann paused a moment in the doorway and smiled. "I'm Haddie Ann Jordan," she said sweetly, "one of your aunt's best friends. You may tell her I called, and—I forgive you for your—your rudeness."

The young man laughed harshly. "I wish you luck," he said.

Haddie Ann heard the rustle of drapery coming near, so, chuckling to herself, she hurried on home.

Haddie Ann thought it would be a good idea to have a headache the next day. She drank hot tea and swathed her head in cooling cloths and talked incessantly about the awful pain just behind her eyes.

"You'll be all right by tonight, dear," her mother encouraged.

"I hope so, mother, for your sake," Haddie Ann said gloomily. To herself she swore that if she had to fall into a dozen realistic fits she would not spend that evening at Martin's.

By 6 o'clock that evening Mrs. Jordan had pressed Haddie Ann's brown charmeuse, and it hung ready over the foot of the bed where the girl lay with closed eyes—and the little bronze slippers rested in state on the top of Haddie Ann's desk.

At 7 o'clock Mrs. Jordan tip-toed in. "Shall I phone Mrs. Martin and say you're not able to come?" she whispered.

"Yes, do, mother," Haddie Ann pleaded.

Just then the telephone rang. Mrs. Jordan hastened downstairs, and in a moment called up: "Haddie Ann, Mrs. Martin wants to speak to you."

The pretender lay very still for a moment, thinking hard; then she tumbled down from the bed and went slowly to the telephone.

"Yes?" she said into the mouthpiece.

"Is this you, Haddie Ann?" came Mrs. Martin's voice.

"Yes."

"Well, this is Mrs. Martin?"

"Yes? How are you?"

"Pause."

"Well, I just got home from the beach late this afternoon, and John said—was it really you, Haddie Ann?"

"Yes, it was I."

"Well, you blessed child, you were certainly abused. John and my erring sister are down on their knees by the telephone beseeching me to offer apologies—and John says—"

"Yes?" Haddie Ann said, and then promptly bit her tongue.

Mrs. Martin laughed merrily. "Well, dear, I'll let John speak for himself—we'll see you tonight?"

"Yes, I'll come," Haddie Ann said sweetly.

Later that evening Haddie Ann sat out on Mrs. Martin's pergola, alone. The clinging folds of her brown dress fell gracefully on the paved floor. She gazed at the little tip of a bronze slipper that peeped out from beneath. "If I hadn't chosen you—" she whispered softly.

Then John came striding through the French windows at the end of the pergola, carrying two trays of dainties. Over one arm hung his mother's shawl. After setting the trays on a tea stand near, he paused behind the girl's chair and gently placed the shawl about her slender shoulders.

"December evenings are cool—even in California," he said.

Haddie Ann murmured her thanks, and then gazed pensively at the back of his clean-cut head while he busied himself for a moment over the trays. She raised her eyes to the stars, twinkling through the wooden beams above, and her heart cried out mutely: "Oh, Fate, what next—what next!"

Marvelous Escape From Death.

[Strand:] During a thunderstorm in Deal, England, Minnie Rogers, aged 17, was walking along one of the small back streets of the town carrying a number of umbrellas, etc., when a vivid flash of lightning, evidently attracted by the steel frame of one of the umbrellas she was holding, ripped open her own umbrella, struck her, and threw her violently to the ground. There was only one gentleman in the street at the time, and he assisted her to rise. Strangely enough, when she had done so she found that all her clothes, umbrella, and cap were perfectly dry, whereas before she had been drenched, for the rain poured down in torrents. Her description of her feeling was: "I felt just as though my head had been stung by a wasp, there was a singing noise in my ears, and I seemed to see a bright light, like the sun, shining through my umbrella." With the exception of her hair being slightly singed, she sustained no injury.

Cans by the Million.

[Wide World Magazine:] That over 6,140,000 cases of canned salmon were packed on the Pacific Coast of North America during the season of 1912 will seem to many people a surprising statement; but it is true, and, furthermore, if all the tins used that season 294,762,576 one-pound cans—were laid end to end they would extend in a straight line for over 21,500 miles, or would come within about 3500 miles of encircling the globe at the equator. To fill these cans some 67,500,000 salmon were needed, while some 20,000,000 more were required for the preparation of smoked, pickled, mild-cured, and frozen salmon. Several other millions were sold in a fresh condition, and the whole product was valued at something like $35,000,000.

Men,

STATESMEN and politicians are all very well in their way, but beside great artists they pale and dwindle somewhat."

The speaker was David Belasco. He was praising Nijinsky, the wonderful Russian dancer. He went on:

"Nijinsky will perhaps dance in New York next year. If he does his salary will be very, very high. An agent said to him in a discussion of his salary:

"But, my dear sir, that's more than President Wilson gets!"

"Very well," said Nijinsky, "suppose you get President Wilson to dance my 'Spectre de la Rose' and 'Sylphides' for you in New York, then?"—[Washington Star.]

It Looked Like Labor.

THIS one was told the other afternoon by Senator James P. Clark of Arkansas, in substantiation of the saying that appearances are often deceiving.

Some time since, according to the Senator, two farmers were talking crops over a rail fence when they saw a tramp coming down the road with a shovel on his shoulder.

"Look here, Willie," exclaimed one of the farmers when the tramp came abreast of them, "do you mean to say that you are actually going to get down to work and do a piece of diggin'?"

"Not on your life!" promptly responded the hobo with charming frankness.

"Not surprised ter hear it," was the smiling response of the farmer, "but what are ye goin' ter do with that shovel?"

"Use it for a frying pan," answered the tramp. "I am a trifle shy on cookin' utensils."—[Boston Advertiser.]

Art Defended.

ANOTHER echo from the Loan Exhibit. The man was from out of town, and rather inclined to be critical. The girl was a Clevelander, and filled with civic pride.

They paused in front of a striking picture.

"Ah, that's an old master!" exclaimed the man.

"Maybe it is," defended the girl, "but you can see for yourself that the frame is perfectly new!"—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.]

A Correction.

IN A TOWN of such size that everyone knows everyone else it is often customary to speak of people by their first names, even when one would not do so to their faces. The butcher is known as Joe Smith, the grocer as Frank Parsons, the lawyer as Will Andrews, and no offense is meant or taken. One day a friend was helping a teacher of the industrial school to put hats and coats on forty little members of the kindergarten class. Two little tow-headed girls attracted her attention, and as she tied their hoods she asked:

"Are you Charlie Porter's little girls?" Two serious little blue eyes looked up as the elder replied:

"His name was Charlie when he was a little boy. He's Mr. Porter now."—[Exchange.]

What Might Have Been.

THEY were talking about the joys of a good cigar, and Congressman Henry T. Helgesen of North Dakota was reminded of a certain esteemed citizen who was greatly opposed to tobacco in any form.

One afternoon the anti-smoke party met an acquaintance who was industriously puffing away on a mammoth pipe, and in another minute an argument on the evil effects of the weed was in full swing.

"You may say what you please in its defense," emphatically declared the anti, "but tobacco is known to be poisonous to the human system and has a tendency to shorten life."

"You are entirely mistaken," responded the other, who was a healthy-looking delegate of several summers. "I have smoked regularly ever since I was 14, and I am now 60."

"Yes," eagerly rejoined the other, who wouldn't be convinced, "and if you hadn't smoked you might have been 70."—[Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.]

The Moral.

"THE persistency with which children see in a fable some other moral than the one which it is intended that they shall see is often distressing," remarks a Philadelphia instructor of the young. "I had related to one little boy the story of the wolf and the lamb and had followed it up with the remark:

"And now you see, Tommy, that the lamb would not have been eaten by the wolf if he had been good and sensible."

"Yes, I understand," said Tommy. "If the lamb had been good and sensible we should have had him to eat!"—[Lippincott's.]

Two Ways to Celebrate.

WE WERE talking about holidays to the very wise stenographer. She has been a stenographer for a number of years, and she is nobody's fool. We said:

"How do you celebrate Thanksgiving?"

"By taking a day off," she said.

"Then how do you celebrate your birthday?"

"Huh! By taking a year off!"—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.]

Room for Doubt.

ASMILE played over the features of Congressman Stanley E. Bowdile of Ohio the other evening when the talk at a social session switched to art. It reminded him, he said, of Smith and Jones.

One day Smith and Jones were looking at a picture and admiring its wonderful realism.

"It makes me think of an artist that I once heard of," reflectively remarked Smith. "It is said that he painted cobwebs on the ceiling so truthfully that the servant girl wore herself into an attack of nervous prostration trying to sweep them down."

"He did?" responded Jones, as his face broke into a smile.

"Yes," declared the other, with a hurt expression. "You act as if you doubt it."

"Well," returned Jones, "there may have been such an artist, but there was never such a servant girl!"—[Philadelphia Telegraph.]

Disproving a Proverb.

LADY COOK (Tennessee Claffin) was talking in Pittsburgh about time's changes.

"Women used to wear the hoop skirt," she said, "and the wind blew it up outrageously. She now wears the slashed skirt, a much more modest affair."

"Time changes all things," ended Lady Cook. "I said to a young man the other day:

"Distance lends enchantment."

"But not," he answered, "when you're taking your girl home in a taxicab."—[Minneapolis Journal.]

Her Age.

THE maiden lady of uncertain age became very indignant when the census taker asked her age.

"Did you see the girls next door," she asked: "the Hill twins?"

"Certainly," replied the census man.

"And did they tell you their age?"

"Yes."

"Well," she snapped as she shut the door in his face, "I'm just as old as they are."

"Oh, very well," said the census man to himself, and he wrote down in his book: "Jane Johnson—as old as the Hills."—[Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.]

The Caller.

MR. VAUGHAN was out shopping one morning, and upon her return home she asked Annie, her maid, if there had been any callers during her absence.

"Yes, mum," replied Annie.

"Who called?" inquired the mistress.

"Mrs. Cassidy, mum," replied the girl.

"Mrs. Cassidy?" repeated Mrs. Vaughan, thoughtfully. "Why, I don't know any Mrs. Cassidy."

"No, mum," answered Annie. "She didn't come to see you, mum, she came to see me."—[Lippincott's.]

New Line of Art.

THE red-headed and dissatisfied boarder was a large man with a large appetite. After dinner he went out into the narrow yard, shook both his fists at the silvery moon, hurled several imprecations toward the congress of the stars, and burst forth into a picturesque and voluminous flood of abuse which was devoted entirely to the landlady.

One of the other boarders, who had been at the house a long time, thereby accumulating a pallid look and a palate with corns on it, drew near timidly and ventured to ask what the special kick was.

"What's the matter?" echoed the large man. "That old dame's the first woman I ever knew who could literally paint food on a plate."—[Popular Magazine.]

Why He Chuckled.

THE elderly stout man in the fourth row was attentively following the pastor's sermon.

"Let us then," said the exhorter, "break the bonds of custom and throw off the shackles of self, and acknowledge our debt to life's fundamental lessons. Let us deduct from the year's balance sheet those obligations which we are morally bound to assume."

At this point the stout man suddenly chuckled and slapped his leg with considerable force.

After the sermon he was overtaken by the pastor.

"You seemed greatly pleased with one section of the sermon," he said.

"Yes," replied the stout man. "What you said reminded me of a ripping new scheme for beating the income tax."—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.]

Used to Advantage.

THE Sunday-school teacher was possessed of the praiseworthy desire to promote thrift among the class of lads. He had given Joe and Johnny sixpence each for doing some work for him.

"I hope to hear when we meet again," he said, "that you have used the money to advantage."

The next time they met Joe produced two sixpences.

"Well done, my lad," said the delighted teacher. "I am pleased to see my lessons are having their fruits. But what of your six-pence, Johnny?" said he to the other hopeful.

"Please, sir, I lost it tossin' wid Joe!"—[Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.]

Heard in Sunday-School.

ON MISSIONARY SUNDAY the Sunday-school scholars who gave a dime each of their savings to equip a missionary to Bonobo Gha were requested to accompany each gift with an appropriate text or sentiment. Billy handed his dime to the teacher and said: "Spread the gospel." "Very good," said the teacher. "Now, Sammy, what is your sentiment?" "He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord," replied Sammy. "That is fine," said the teacher. "Now, Jack, it is your turn." Jack glowed, handed over his dime, and answered: "A fool and his money are soon parted."

The Druggist's Diagnosis.

PEOPLE who go to apothecaries to have their diseases prescribed for occasionally get very strange diagnoses. One day a farmer, wearing a long countenance, is said to have entered an apothecary's shop and remarked: "I seem to have something queer in my stomach, and I want you to give me something for it."

"What are your symptoms?" the apothecary asked.

"Every little while something seems to rise up and then settle back again, and by and by it rises up again."

The apothecary put his chin in the palm of his hand and meditated. "Look here," he said, gravely, "you haven't gone and swallowed an elevator, have you?"—[Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.]

"I wouldn't let any man black my eye," said one of the acquaintances.

"Ah, yo' don't know my Hennery black eye jes' shows how he loves me. dat's de kinder man I like."—[Hennery's News.]

LITTLE JIM, though he attended day-school every week, did not quite so much about scriptural knowledge as he ought to have known, but when his teacher asked: "Where was Noah's Ark?" he was rather angry that she asked him unable to answer a simple question like that.

"Don't you think I know anything?" asked.

"Well, where was it, then?" he repeated; and then he informed his teacher.

"I am glad to make your acquaintance," said the editor, enthusiastically, "and the story you sent us is perfectly wonderful. I have a very sore side, why use a nom de plume?"

"I'm not after fame," objected the author. "It's money I want."

"But you'll get just as much money as fame, according to the unwritten law of the world."—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.]

Leading Types of Domestic Fowls.

By Frank Heck.

Many Varieties.

SILVER DUCKWING GAMES UNIQUE AMONG THE BIRDS.

In seventy-five years the domestic fowl has been developed from practically a mongrel stock to a high standard of perfection and embracing many varieties. This has been accomplished by breeding with imported stock.

The result has been the development of a "billion-dollar industry"—one of the leading industries in America today. How this wonderful achievement has been brought about is told briefly in the following article. Advice is also given to the average breeder on what and how to breed to secure the best results.]

THE history of the domestic fowls of America covers a period of about seventy-five years, or from about 1840 to the present date, but the greater part of it can be written with developments of the past fifty years as a basis. In the early days of the poultry industry in this country the fowls were little better than common mongrel stock, and were imported from various foreign countries solely for their economic value as table poultry.

With very few exceptions the beautiful and profitable standard-bred chickens seen at the poultry shows and in the yards of poultrymen at the present time are the result of the skill and intelligent effort of American poultrymen who have originated a great majority of the breeds, and have vastly improved the remainder. The breeding of poultry has risen to the dignity of general livestock breeding, and is now known as a "billion-dollar industry," by which is meant that the annual production of poultry and eggs reaches that amount. There are many different breeds and varieties that are distinct from each other and that are scientifically bred in their purity just as are horses, cattle, sheep and swine.

Principal American Breeds.

The various breeds are divided into classes, and each class derives its name from the country, or section, in which it originated. The principal ones, known as American breeds, are the Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes; and Rhode Island Reds. These breeds are divided into several distinct varieties. There are six varieties of Plymouth Rocks, namely, the Barred, White, Buff, Silver Penciled, Partridge and Columbian. All of the varieties of Plymouth Rocks are identical in shape and in general characteristics, the only differences being in the color of the plumage, as the names indicate. The Wyandotte family consists of eight varieties, as follows: Silver, Golden, White, Buff, Partridge, Silver Penciled, and Columbian. The Rhode Island Reds embody two varieties, both of which are the same in shape and color, the difference consisting wholly in the comb formation, one variety having a single comb and the other a rose comb.

Other Varieties.

The above explanation of the American class is illustrative of the other recognized breeds and varieties. The Asiatic class comprises the Brahma, Light and Dark; the Cochins, Buff, White Partridge, and Black; the Langshans, White and Black. The Mediterranean class consists of eight varieties of Leghorns, three varieties of Minorcas, the White-faced Black Spanish, Blue Andalusians, and Anconas. In the English class are the several varieties of Orpingtons, the Redcaps, and the Dorkings. The French fowls are the Houdans, Crevecoeurs, and LaFleche. There are six varieties of the Hamburgs and eight of the Polish fowls. There are other miscellaneous varieties of chickens not so well known as those mentioned, and there are about thirty varieties of Bantams. There are also about twenty-five varieties of turkeys, ducks, and geese.

It is, of course, not possible in the space allotted to this article to even describe briefly the origin and development of the more important breeds of chickens, much less the entire list, but a few general remarks may be of interest to the beginner in poultry keeping who is in doubt as to what breed or variety would best suit his tastes and purposes.

It is a great mistake for him to select a variety which is not pleasing to the eye in the matter of size, shape, and color, because success will come easier, more quickly, and in greater volume if the poultryman is enthusiastically interested in his work; and he will be more enthusiastically interested if he is attracted to his fowls by their beauty as well as by their practical value. To some there is nothing in the feathered kingdom that can approach the beauty of a snow-white fowl, and to others the same is true of the solid black fowl with its lustrous black plumage.

Variegated Colored Fowls.

The fowls of variegated-colored plumage also have their ardent admirers, and in gratifying the personal fancy for any particular variety of fowls the work with them becomes more of a pleasure and less of a drudgery. Personal tastes differ also in the size and shape of a fowl. Some breeders can become enraptured over the neat, trim, sprightly little four or five-pound Leghorn, with his alertness and almost constant activity. Others prefer the big, docile, easy-going nine or ten-pound Brahmans.

The many breeds of intermediate sizes and weights are also exceedingly popular. The professional breeders have really produced fowls to suit the tastes of all beginners, whatever their ideas may be of shape, size, and color. In all large cities, and in hundreds of smaller ones, poultry shows are held annually, usually in December or January, and a bit of good advice to the beginner is that he visit one of these shows and see for himself the choice specimens of the many breeds and varieties. This will enable him to more intelligently make his choice.

Public opinion, which is the largest and most popular prejudice, has divided the fowls into three classes, which are the egg producers, the game fowls, and the meat birds. The first two mentioned are the smaller breeds, supposed to excel all other varieties in quantity of eggs laid. The last, however, is supposed to lay a much smaller number of eggs, but to possess much greater qualities of table poultry because of their greater size and weight. The general-purpose fowls are medium in size and weight, and it is claimed that they occupy a middle ground between the other two as regards production, thus making them good table fowls.

Mediterraneans Heavy Layers.

Advocates of the above theory insist that it will pay every poultryman to raise Mediterranean varieties in the laying class, the American varieties in the general-purpose class, and the fowls in the meat class; but carrying this to the limit of its interpretation, and in all breeds, the theory is that the smaller varieties of fowls are the laying birds, and the medium size are the general-purpose fowls, and the big breeds occupy the meat class.

There is just enough evidence to above claims to justify one in asking an average beginner to take up one of the general-purpose breeds in order to build up a market poultry industry cater to the demand for both meat and eggs. Note particularly that the average person and the two branches of the market end

Fowls for Exhibition Only.

BY LOUIS PAUL GRAHAM.

This breed is a descendant of our oldest known breed of poultry, the Game. Their ancestors for centuries were used in cock fights for the pleasure of their masters, and the custom is accredited with originating in India and from there passing on to Rome and Britain. Cock fighting was a recognized passion with English gentlemen of early history, and until forbidden during the nineteenth century was universally practiced.

When bred for fighting, color was not considered, and all colors were bred together, provided their fighting qualities or the fighting qualities of their progenitors were above criticism. Pet Games are still bred and secretly fought, although the newspapers often describe raids by the police on secret cock fights and the fining and jailing of the offending promoters and the destruction of all cocks caught in the raid. Pet Games are also exhibited in some poultry exhibitions, and you will note that they are of as many colors as Joseph's coat.

After the edict forbidding cock fighting in England, fanciers set about breeding Games to uniform colors and to developing them along what some consider grotesque shapes. The result was the modern Exhibition Game of which the subject of this sketch is one of the varieties. The Exhibition Game has been kept pure in color and bred for extreme length of neck and legs for many years, so that today it will and does reproduce itself exactly.

Exhibition Games are very tall. Their bodies are as large as the average fowl and they are claimed to make excellent table fowls.

The hens are only average layers, and as a consequence the breed is not raised for utility purposes. It is a fanciers' fowl pure and simple, and as such is bred and exhibited. The breeders strive to produce specimens with the longest and slimmest necks, short, hard, heart-shaped bodies, short, narrow, closely-folded tails, extreme length of legs and thighs and perfection of brilliantly-colored plumage.

The chicks are somewhat difficult to rear, but if given good dry quarters, a grass run and feed that will produce plenty of bone and muscle, very fine specimens may be reared.

The Silver Duckwing variety here shown is strikingly colored, its silvery white neck, back, saddle, saddle, top of wings and wing bow contrasting sharply with the rich greenish black of the breast, body and tail in the males, while the female is a sober Quaker gray in color with a slight tinge of salmon on the breast. The hackle is silvery white striped with black.

This variety attracts considerable attention and much comment from the public when seen in the poultry shows.

SILVER DUCKWING GAMES.

Descended from our first known variety of domestic fowl. This game has been bred to such extremes of shape as to be classed as a monstrosity. Yet it is bred by many fanciers and reproduces itself exactly. In fact, the legs seem to get even longer and the characteristics more pronounced with each generation. This is a strictly fancier's fowl and has no qualities which would commend it to our careful commercial poultry farmers.

Hindu Philosophy.

IT IS my purpose to record, as briefly and as tersely as possible, with but few comments, the general points of interest and such information, in a condensed and comprehensive form, as will give the main points of belief (not the practices) of this ancient philosophy.

To Baba Bharati and the late Swami Vivekananda I am especially indebted for the mere outline given in this series. Both of these teachers of this strange philosophy had many followers in this country, especially here in Los Angeles.

There are many persons wasting time, money and energy, thinking to become proficient in the Yoga teachings and thereby to develop into a full-fledged Yogi. The teachings, in many respects, are interesting and entertaining, but the knowledge to fit one for a Yogi is extremely difficult of attainment and, what is more, its practice is utterly impossible in this western world. Not that I would belittle the general trend of the philosophic thought; for it is essentially uplifting, appealing to what is best and noblest in man.

From the Hindooistic point of view it aims to get at the soul and to put into its hands so to speak, the reins of the mind and body. In its beautiful toleration it is well worthy of the strongest commendation. But its practices, in their completeness, are not for us; and anything short of that completeness will never make a Yogi even in India, where everything is favorable for such a consummation. However, the study of the philosophy will give one the Hindu idealists' conception of God, of infinity, of man and his relations to the whole.

What is the Hindu Philosophy?

IT MAY be said to be a species of asceticism which consists in "a complete abstraction from all worldly objects, by which the votary expects to obtain union with the universal spirit, and to acquire superhuman faculties." The word "Yoga" means union (the same as the English word "yoke,") therefore, in this sense, the yoking of the mind to the spirit of God by concentration.

When we of the western world reach the point of "complete abstraction from all worldly objects," it will be when we, ourselves, shall have been "completely abstracted" therefrom. Asceticism is not necessary, but moderation and the control of the physical is our aim in the Occident. The esoteric Hindu is too self-absorbed. His care for his own soul, in abstracting it from the mists and delusions of the sense-world, though highly creditable, has yet the tinge of selfishness; for he does not leave his light to shine for others; he even outcasts his own brethren."

Many that are seeking occult power desire it not for their soul's sake, but for their selfish aggrandizement. And when they obtain it with this selfish taint, they are far the worse for it. They are Fausts that would sell their souls for a pittance of power. This is far more the case in the Orient than in the Occident, for the active whirl of our busy world is not over-conducive to occult development.

In the East we find a hot atmosphere, a luxuriant vegetation, and stupendous mountains, and the form the religion takes is that of power, subtlety, contemplation, stillness, repose, rest, sleep and entrancement. The religion culminates in the ascetic life with its diet of fruit, vegetables, and cereals, and its consequent soul-power—entrancement and magic.

In the West we find a more temperate climate and a more active life, a larger brain and a manifestation of a wider range of the intellectual and practical life; and while we find the same prayer and contemplation and the same sacrifice of the bodily reserves as in the East, we find also less subtlety, less idealism, less repose and more energy, a severer standard of truth, and a more practical benevolence.

The Hindu Triad.

IT IS well to understand upon what foundation this philosophy rests. The triad of Hindu gods consists of:

1. Brahma—The One First Cause, the Creator of the Universe, the One Existence, the Absolute.

The age of Brahma is the duration of creation—311,040,000,000,000 human (lunar) years.

2. Vishnu—The Preserver, who takes care of the universe, and who becomes incarnate from time to time to help mankind.

3. Siva—The Destroyer, and the Conqueror of Darkness.

It is well to understand the various terms that are used in order to follow more intelligently the meanings and workings of these occult teachings.

Bhagavad Gita—The Holy Song, a gem of Indian literature, containing the essence of the Vedanta Philosophy.

It is the best of all sources for a knowledge of the pantheistic philosophy of India. It teaches the Karma Yoga doctrine of action as distinguished from Yoga of Patanjali—the doctrine of refraining from action. Both Yogas seek emancipation from the world; the latter by avoidance of action; the former by intellectual insight into the illusory character of things and actions which makes doing as harmless as refraining from doing.

Buddha—The Enlightened, the name given to one of the greatest incarnations recognized by the Hindus; born sixth century B.C.; an incarnation of self-abnegation, virtue, and wisdom.

"He was regarded," says Henry Clarke Warren, "not as a mere formulation of dry metaphysical propositions, but as a very wise and compassionate friend of his fellow-men. He was full of tact, and all his ways were ways of peace."

Om, or Omkara—The most holy word of the Vedas. A symbolic word, meaning the Supreme Being, the Ocean of Knowledge, and Bliss Absolute. This mystic syllable or ejaculation is used by Hindus and Buddhists in religious rites.

Vedas—The Hindu Scriptures, consisting of the Rig-Veda, the Yajur-Veda, the Arthava-Veda; also, the Brahmanas and the Upanishads, comprising the hymns, rituals, and philosophy of the Hindu religion.

This most ancient sacred literature comprises more than a hundred books. One of the books—the Rig-Veda—the oldest and most important, comprises more than a thousand hymns.

Guru—A dispeller of darkness. A religious teacher who removes the ignorance of the pupil. A real guru is a transmitter of the spiritual impulse that quickens the spirit and awakens a genuine thirst for religion.

Krishna—The most popular of the Hindu divinities, usually held to be the eighth incarnation of the good Vishnu. He appeared in India about 1400 B.C. Most of his teachings are embodied in the Bhagavad Gita. He comes to this earth, it is claimed, once in seventy-one Divine Cycles; that is, in 300,000,000 or more human (lunar) years.

In the epic literature he is the hero of innumerable exploits; the Bhagavad Gita is put into his mouth, as recited to Arjuna. He is reputed to have been brought up as a coward, and under this form is celebrated at the "Holi-festival." He personates the fructifying and reproductive aspect of nature.

Kipling says of him: "In a patch of clear moonlight stood the young herd, the darling of the Gopis, the idol of dreaming maid and of mothers ere their children are born—Krishna, the Well-beloved."

A Man's Best Asset

THE quality, not the quantity, of one's brain is what makes good in this workaday world. I am heartily in accord with Dr. N. W. Philbrook's views as herein expressed:

"The condition of a man's brain largely determines his place in this world. Many a man is a failure who might have been a success, and many a man is less than he might be by 10, 20 or 50 per cent. because his brain, through neglect or abuse, has become weak and inefficient. Keeping one's brain in good business form is more important than keeping a good balance in the bank. A year's income may be gained or lost by a decision which must be made in a moment of time. Many a step has been taken which ended in bankruptcy when the brain was befogged and the mind dulled by causes entirely preventable. To know when to buy or sell, when to hold and when to let go, a man's brain must be working as accurately as a ship's chronometer. Most men are poor because their gray matter is jogging along on the Waterbury plan.

"With some men everything they touch turns to gold. When the panic comes it finds them with mainsail close-reefed and everything from truck to keelson tight and snug, sailing in ballast, with the cargo sold and the cash in the locker, all ready to load up when the gale slackens. There is no mud in that kind of a brain.

"Some men may be born with great business ability, but oftener the difference between men is whether their waste matter is going into their circulation or whether the heart is pumping good rich red blood to the head causing the brain to respond in healthy action and the mind to become clear as a bell and sharp as a tack.

"It is coming to be known to a few, at least, that good brain power as well as health are to be had, as a rule, by the man who is willing to meet the conditions—that the production of vital force may be made to balance the expenditure and leave a surplus, and the mental machinery run as smoothly as a Corliss engine. One of these days a man with a broken-down nervous system in the years when he ought to be in his prime, say from 40 to 60, will be considered guilty of criminal neglect.

"To accomplish this there must first be attention to the nerve supply to the brain and correction of irregularities in the spine which produces pressure upon the spinal nerves. That this is possible is an accomplished fact, and good digestion, elimination, and circulation followed by normal brain power results. Having this, it is up to the man himself whether he keep this, his best business asset, or fritters it away by ignoring the reasonable and essential laws of health. It is a wise man who pays attention to this most important factor in his life work and is able to carry in his head a normal brain of 100 per cent. efficiency."

A Doctor's Opinion of Doctors and Drugs.

THE famous Dr. Majendie at Hotel Dieu (France), having from 3000 to 4000 patients a year, has this to say concerning his profession: "Medicine is a great humbug. Doctors are merely empirics when they are not charlatans. Nature does a great deal, imagination does a great deal, doctors—a little, when they don't do any harm."

In order to ascertain whether his statement would stand or not he made the following experiment; he formed his patients into three classes and then noted results:

In the first class he followed the dispensary and gave the usual medicines, without having the least idea why or wherefore.

In the second class he gave bread pills and colored water—without the patients knowing it.

In the third class he gave—nothing.

The results were as follows: "The greatest mortality existed in the first class—with those who were carefully drugged according to the dispensary. In the second class (bread pills and colored water) nearly all got well. In the third class (where nothing was given) they fretted a little, thought they were neglected (sick people always think they are neglected unless they are well drugged), but Nature came to their aid and they all got well."

This reminds me of a little truism:

"Iills and aches would travel hence if we'd use a little sense."

The Oil of the Onion.

THE medicinal property of the onion is in the oil it contains. It is said to have a deadly effect upon certain bacteria flourishing in various organs of the human body. It is claimed that the monia germ is present in moderate numbers in the mouth of perfectly healthy persons, but the mucous membranes form a sort of protective wall against it. A normal, healthy person has a sweet disposition, and be ready to laugh in almost any situation.

When one has what is commonly called a "cold," the extremely delicate lining of the nose, mouth and throat is intensely irritated and its protective impulse is greatly weakened, thus allowing the monia germ a better foothold than the membrane is in normal condition.

The oil of the onion is a deadly microbe, and by attacking it, the cold and its subsequent development is obviated. The onion may be prepared in various ways, but its efficacy is increased greater when taken raw. "Oil of onion is a cure." Eat the onion at the very first sign of cold.

The Damnable Cigarette.

EXCUSE my French, but that is an adjective that will fit the president of the Colorado live stock association: "Persistent smoking of the cigarette will finally result in either mental or physical breakdown, and sometimes it is almost certain; for the screaming will stop the screams of the nerve is a cruelty. It does not stop the screaming can be changed as qualified for advancement, but it is not the company demand that it should be employed only such as are capable of doing better work than him in your arms, and speaking gently and softly to him today. Therefore, cigarette and head with very cold water will not be tolerated, and the screaming can be changed to cease the habit shall end in real tears, the victory is won."

Corporations. Not that I would advise anyone's privilege or pleasure to smoke from a health viewpoint it pains me, and the quiet sleep it will bring especially to see a young man complete the cure temporarily.

Strange, but True.

HERE is a form of intelligence of the cells of the body that requires the presence of certain things favorably.

And mother must not get excited about it.

If you take tissue salts and place them on a microscopic slide in the microscope and place nitroglycerin on them, they will get as far as possible in the time will have been the perfectly well child become.

If you substitute opium or nitroglycerin for nitroglycerin, then succumb as you will.

The tongue is a perfect thermometer.

The Owl With White Wings.

Turning quickly on his heels the colonel exclaimed, "Why! Hello, Pat! I didn't see you standing there."

"I didn't think you did, and if I had had another cartridge I'd have shot into the air and scared the devil out of you."

"Thank you, sir," replied the colonel sarcastically; "but how did you know there were a devil in me?"

"Well, you know some of these old nuts have pretty bad kernels sometimes," answered Pat, who was quite as skillful at joshing as at fishing.

Laughingly they both sat down on a large bench beneath a weeping willow that overhung the bubbling spring and were soon lost in a sea of conversation. At first they discussed the prospects of an early rain and its effect upon the ripening corn, which had begun to dry and shrivel for want of moisture. From one thing to another the conversation gradually drifted and neither realized that two hours had slipped quietly away.

For a moment both were silent, when suddenly Pat exclaimed, as if a new thought had seized him. "Say, colonel! Last night I tried to catch some of those large bass that hang around the Whirlpool Rapids, but to save my life I couldn't get a bite. All the bites I got were mosquito bites and the drotted things tried their best to eat me alive. I never saw such large gnats and mosquitoes in all my life—"

"I saw you going home," interrupted the colonel, "and wondered why you were going so early."

"Well, see here, colonel, I'm not at all superstitious; never was and never expect to be, but a peculiar thing happened last night that actually made me uneasy, and I got so nervous that I couldn't have caught a fish had it swallowed hook and all."

"You must have seen a ghost," suggested the colonel with more or less anxiety and inquisitiveness in the tone of his voice.

"Well, I never heard before of a ghost having wings," replied Pat, as he bit off a big chew of plug tobacco.

"Wings!" nervously exclaimed the colonel, moving his end of the bench away from the spring, as if the sparkling waters might reflect something hidden in his inmost soul.

"I was sitting on a large rock," continued Pat, "trying to persuade those devilish fish to bite, but they wouldn't even give me a nibble. Everything was as weird and quiet as a grave-yard, and the only sounds I heard were the roaring whirlpools below me and a band of mosquitoes that were doing their best to sing me to sleep. They had almost succeeded when suddenly I heard the keen crack of a rifle directly across the slough from where I was sitting and I almost jumped into the river. Before I had time to collect my senses that old owl with the white wings flew within thirty feet of me, then turned and disappeared among the cliffs. Now, don't think me superstitious, colonel, but really, I'm afraid that something awful is going to happen."

"What do you mean?" said the colonel, again moving into a darker shade of the willow. The grave expression and earnestness with which he spoke were indeed very perceptible to any save Pat, who was himself growing a little excited and nervous as the weird scenes of the night before seemed vividly reflected in the bubbling spring at his feet.

"Colonel, were you married to Mrs. LeRoy when that terrible tragedy occurred over on the Little Meramec?"

"No, that occurred before Mr. LeRoy died. I was in St. Louis at the time and know very little of the details." And the colonel turned the brim of his large felt hat partially over his eyes as if the reflection of the sun in the sparkling water was hurting them.

"Well, I know all about the facts," quickly replied Pat. "It happened within half a mile of my house. My oldest boy, together with two others, started to Sunday-school, and as they passed the little white schoolhouse at Longdale an owl with white wings flew into the belfry. Like boys they thought they could catch it, so they opened a shutter and climbed inside. When they reached the bell-tower a stifling odor almost drove them back. But their eagerness to secure the bird led them on, so they climbed into the small room just below the bell. What they discovered there put away any notion of catching the owl, which became frightened and flew away. On the floor lay a dead woman, no other than their teacher, Miss

Wilson. Her mutilated body indicated murder and the horrible sight drove the poor lads almost crazy. They ran home screaming and soon every one in the valley was talking of the dreadful crime. As we carefully removed the body to the little church across the road, that same old owl with the white wings sat quietly in one of the dark crevices of The Rock of a Guilty Conscience." We traced the murderer without much difficulty, and when escape seemed impossible the girl's sweetheart made a full confession. The bird has not been seen or heard of until last night and I tell you, colonel, there is sure something terrible in store for us."

Had Pat continued the colonel might have collapsed, but a neighbor came up in a buggy and Pat drove away with him, yelling as he turned the corner: "Say, colonel, tell Harvey I'll be down early in the morning to tackle those squirrels again."

Alone, in the shade of the weeping willow, and beside the crystal waters of Willow Springs, the colonel sat; his heart beating as if with a deadly fever, his eyes flashing with terror. The beautiful sunshine and murmuring trees seemed to pierce his very soul with a two-edged sword of condemnation.

The morning mail left some St. Louis papers at the front gate, so the colonel rose from his shady seat, refreshed himself with another cool drink and walked slowly to the house. But the papers, however, did not interest the colonel as they usually did, and he merely glanced at the headlines as he walked from the front gate to the porch. Ascending the white stone steps he suddenly stopped and braced himself against the bannisters, the papers falling scattering to the floor.

"What's the matter?" he asked half audibly as the peculiar procession in the meadow came nearer the house. A vision of the hospital staff carrying the dead and dying on stretchers from the battlefields of Gettysburg, where he had worn the gray, was as plain to him as if it were in actual progress. But what were those four men carrying who were coming directly toward him from the direction of Dark Island?

Breathlessly he waited while onward the men came, and as they passed through the barn-yard gate he observed the likeness of a human form lying upon the rudely constructed stretcher, uncovered save for the face, which was partially hidden by a small white handkerchief. When they reached the spring they stopped and laid their burden on the wooden bench beneath the willow, one of them going on toward the house. As he opened the front gate he removed his hat and in a low, solemn voice, quivering with nervous excitement, began:

"Col. Patterson, I believe?"

The colonel could scarcely speak, but a nod of his head assured the stranger that it was he, whereat the stranger continued: "I regret very much the duty which has fallen upon me but it is often the most solemn duties that are the hardest to perform. Colonel, I can hardly tell you, but I must. The body of your little step-son, Harvey LeRoy; lies yonder on the bench beneath the weeping willow—dead. We found him on his knees, his head resting against an old oak snag on Dark Island."

"My God! man, what are you talking about?" screamed the colonel, throwing himself into a rocking chair and burying his face in his hands.

Placing his hands upon the colonel's shoulder the stranger explained: "Five of us were hunting on Dark Island this morning, trying to capture one of those large bobcats. Suddenly the dogs began acting so strangely and whining so pitifully that we were all filled with a strange, weird feeling.

At first we thought we had a large snake surrounded, so we leveled our guns and slowly approached the trunk of a large oak snag at the base of which the object lay. As we came nearer we could see it lying in the poison ivy and we believed it to be a wild animal of some kind. I assure you, colonel," and his voice trembled almost beyond understanding, "that we were all dumfounded and surprised beyond expression when we realized that the object before us was a human being. For a moment all were silent, afraid to move or even speak. However, when I had summoned sufficient courage to speak to it it never answered, never moved, and we were soon confronted with the awful fact that we had found a dead man. A small hole in the back of the head indicates that he was shot with a rifle or pistol, while the position of the body, together with other evidence, points conclusively to murder."

For a moment the colonel was dazed beyond expression, but as the numbing shock of the discovery rapidly wore off he recovered his composure admirably and spoke in a cool, deliberate manner: "I don't understand. Please bring the body to the house."

After the strangers had safely placed their grawsome charge in the library and were preparing to leave, the spokesman extended a sympathetic hand to Col. Patterson, remarking: "Colonel, yours is indeed a heavy burden, one in which there is little consolation to be had, and yet it may be somewhat consoling to you to know that your friend, Detective Moore, was with us when we made the horrible discovery. He immediately returned to Unionville for his bloodhounds, saying he believed that he could run down the murderer before tomorrow night. May the hand of Providence help him to find the right man."

Bowing their heads the strangers slowly went their way, leaving the colonel alone in the room with no one save the lifeless body of his little step-son, and a just and omniscient God who "is no respecter of persons."

When Detective Moore arrived on Dark Island that afternoon with two well-trained bloodhounds, he had little trouble in giving them the trail, and they were soon following the footsteps of what he called a "cowardly, treacherous criminal." But the dogs could go no farther than a short distance in the meadow and there the scent was lost. For a moment the detective stood perfectly still but never missed a single movement of the hounds in their fruitless effort to pick up the trail again. Suddenly he turned to one of his companions and asked: "Were there any horses in this pasture last night?"

The man to whom he spoke was none other than Col. Patterson's hired man, who quickly replied, "Yes, there were six."

"Were any of them gentle?"

"Yes, one of them was the family nag and anything could ride her without even a halter."

"I thought so," was the quick reply of Detective Moore, "and that fellow who committed this crime was no fool, either. He knew just exactly what he was doing, but we'll find the trail again as sure as the sun shines," and a smile brightened his sunburnt face. "We'll go clear around this field on the outside," he said; and off they started. On they went without a sign of the missing trail, but when they reached the barn-yard gate the dogs gave a loud yelp and were soon at the rear corner of the cabin. In less than ten minutes Uncle Jim Bailey was in the toils of the law, bound to the wily detective by a pair of steel handcuffs.

"A clear case without the slightest doubt," remarked the detective, as he exhibited a small rifle with a discharged cartridge still in the barrel. "Why, this is evidence enough to send any man to the gallows;" and he handed the rifle to Col. Patterson.

"Absolute, unquestionable proof," replied the colonel, his face beaming with confidence and satisfaction as he took the incriminating evidence.

The passionate pleadings of the old darky only increased the rage hatred and indignation of the crowd that had gathered, and the suggestion that the law be taken into their own hands met with a hearty approval.

"Hang him!" exclaimed Pat Blakely. "No, never! That's too good for the black scoundrel. Burn him alive! That's just the thing for him, and let the colonel apply the torch."

"No, we'll hang him and I'll tie the rope myself," rejoined the colonel, calmly placing a rope around the man's neck as if it were a very common occurrence.

With a brave military step that had never feared or faltered before shot and shell, the colonel led the procession to a large oak tree that stood behind the barn.

Suddenly he stopped and gave a terrifying scream as if the spirits from the world below had seized him. Falling to his knees he cried in agonizing terror: "Yes, I shot him! I know I shot him! I wanted his farm! I wanted his farm! Of course I shot him, and Justice has sent you to claw out my very heart and eat it with your poisoned bill!" Paralyzed and speechless the crowd stood aghast while Col. Patterson jerked a large revolver from his inside pocket as if to shoot the bird whose staring eyes sank like daggers into his very soul, placed the muzzle of the weapon to his own heart and fired.

Frightened by the crack of the pistol, an owl with white wings flew out of a small tree in the chicken-yard and disappeared in the darkness, carrying in its claws a half-grown Plymouth Rock.
